BREAK GRIP OF STANDARD OIL

Government's Exposures of Great Monopoly's Extortion Starts Movement to Reorganize Company—Kellogg Continues Arraignment of the Trust—Huge Profits Stagger Financial World.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Armed with figures showing that the Standard Oil companies have made profits as great as 1,000 per cent. in a single year, and that statistics were juggled in the Waters-Pierce Oil Company when the concern was driven out of Texas, Inquisitor Frank B. Kellogg to-day began a fresh attack on the great trust.

Already the extraordinary exposures of the investigation have had an effect on the financial world. Standard Oil is no longer regarded as invincible. There is talk of a reorganization, and it has been intimated that John D. Rockefeller himself would again take command.

Attorney Kellogg, who is counsel for the government in the suit to dissolve the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, is making a strenuous effort to get on the record of the Federal Court before which the case is being heard a copy of the "original trust agreement" of 1882, which was the beginning of the greatest combine in the world.

This trust or trusteeship was entered into by various oil companies, who placed their affairs in the hands of nine trustees. It was declared illegal in 1892 and was in course of dissolution during the eight preceding years, until the present company was formed in 1899.

Expect Tilford on Stand.

It was expected that Wesley H. Tilford, treasurer of the Standard of New Jersey, who was the last witness on the stand last evening, would be put through a rigorous examination to-day. Tilford was connected with the Rockefeller interests long before the formation of the trust 25 years ago.

He showed how John D. Rockefeller was operating his system even in those early days, when he testified that in 1881 he was an officer of the Chess-Carley Company, serving that concern as the representative of the Standard Oil Company. The Chess-Carley Company later went in to the trust.

Tilford has been treasurer of the Standard since the new company was organized in 1899, and for two or three years has been vice-president of the Standard of New York. He served as one of the liquidating trustees from 1892 till 1899.

With gentle voice and mildest of manners, Kellogg is extracting from reluctant witnesses the long-kept secrets of the greatest of all corporations and throwing light upon the inner workings of the business organization considered the most marvellous in the world.

KELLOGG GETS FACTS.

In March, 1904, the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey turned over to a Mr. Van Buren, through C. M. Pratt, trustee, stock of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company of Texas worth $4,000,000.

The government is trying to find out why the combine sold him this stock, which was earning $1,852,000 yearly. Pratt said he thought the price was "fair." Van Buren held the stock two years, disposed of it and then took it back.

Partial light is thrown upon the transaction by reason of the known fact that the Waters-Pierce concern has been driven out of Texas as an illegal corporation and that Mr. Van Buren is a son-in-law of John D. Archbold, so that the stock never was far away from headquarters.

Part of the Standard, now undergoing examination, has any explanation to make of this.

This interesting problem was also thrust forward to Kellogg.

SARTLING PROBLEM.

These two financial performances are the chief features of the investigation. In addition, however, it was brought out that John D. Rockefeller was a director of the Standard of New Jersey as late as 1882, before the Ohio courts got after the oil men and force the dissolution of the original trust. Wesley H. Tilford, now treasurer of the New Jersey

"JOHN D. DISHONEST, MUST KEEP HIM OUT"

—IDA M. TARBELL

BETHEL, Ct., Sept. 19.—The report that John D. Rockefeller is to be put back in control of the Standard Oil Company because of the illness and inability of Henry H. Rogers to direct the monopoly brings the following from Miss Ida M. Tarbell, the great woman opponent of the Trust, who is stopping here.

By Ida M. Tarbell.

John D. Rockefeller is most emphatically the man above all others who should not be put back in control of the Standard Oil Company. The new leader should be an honest man—strong enough in principle and will to depose all the other men who have been brought into charge during the Rockefeller and Rogers regimes. Standard Oil will be honest oil only when its whole soured slate has been rubbed clean.

It is rumored that Mr. Rogers's inability to continue at the head of the company will soon result in the return of John D. Rockefeller to personal control.

I do not know that that is so, but if it is I should say that the shift would be for the worst instead of for the better. Above all men, Mr. Rockefeller is not the one who should be given charge of Standard Oil again.

"Hypocrite or Narrow."

When he developed the corporation years ago, standards of right and wrong were different. Rockefeller built up the Oil Trust under methods which would now bring it into the greatest disrepute.

Mr. Rockefeller would probably believe that the right way to run the company would be any way that would bring in the richest results. He could not understand any other system. He considers that the man who makes the most money is the most worthy man, and of such he would build his directorate.

It may be that Mr. Rockefeller believes himself honest. I do not say he knows what he is himself. But he is either the greatest hypocrite in all the world, or else he is a very narrow, honest man.

I must decline to discuss Mr. Rogers, since he is ill. I will say, however, that he is one of the old Standard Oil regime, who has some other thoughts outside the profits of his company.

"William Unpious."

As to John D. Archbold, who has been mentioned for the presidency, he is very much like Mr. Rockefeller. Of young John D.'s availability I know little. I have heard that William Rockefeller is a jovial, more broad-minded man than John, and has none of the latter's piousness—however far either way that counts.

Daniel O'Day is another of the old clique. It was he who established the pipe lines now monopolized by the Standard, but which should be common carriers for the public good.

I hope the present investigation will bring about that result, and take from the Standard the 40,000 miles of pipe that O'Day coerced with his "Irish shillelah."

I hope that much good will come from the governmental inquisition.

Much good has come already of the stubborn fight that the independent oil people have been opposing to Standard's aggression for years.

In 1870, for instance, the Standard obtained control of 95 per cent. of all the oil business in the country. Now, though of course its actual volume has grown enormously, it controls only 70 per cent.

In 1879 its profits were 1,000 per cent. Now, though in actual figures they are 500 times greater, the percentage remains the same in some instances. These things show the fruits of the hard, patient battle that has been waged against the combine. Results should show even faster from this time forth.

CONSECRATE SECOND BISHOP OF FALL RIVER

RT. REV. DANIEL F. FEEHAN ELEVATED TO HIGH OFFICE AT IMPOSING CEREMONY.

Special to the Boston American.

FALL RIVER, Sept. 19.—With the administering of the oath of office and the bestowing of the episcopal cross, ring, mitre and sceptre, Right Reverend Daniel F. Feehan was to-day consecrated second bishop of the Fall River diocese. The exercises were held in St. Mary's Pro-Cathedral, corner of Spring and Second streets. More than 300 priests and dignitaries of the Catholic Church in New England attended.

The office of elevation was performed by the Right Rev. Thomas D. Beaven, of Springfield, under whom the new bishop served many years as a parish priest in Fitchburg. The exercises were the first of the kind ever held in this city, as the late Right Rev. Bishop Stang chose the Cathedral in Providence to be invested with the insignia and honors of his rank.

Pontifical High Mass.

The ceremonies began with a pontifical high mass at 10:30 o'clock, Bishop Beaven officiated. Immediately following the mass the exercises of consecration took place. Bishop Beaven was assisted by the Right Rev. Matthew Harkins of Providence, R. I., and Right Rev. Michael Tierney of Hartford. Archbishop William H. O'Connell occupied the seat of honor within the sanctuary. The ceremonies lasted for more than two hours.

Following the consecration a sermon was delivered by Right Rev. Philip J. Garrigan of Sioux City, Ia., who was Bishop Feehan's predecessor in the Fitchburg pastorate.

Plan Receptions Sunday.

Next Sunday the newly installed bishop will pontificate for the first time at the 10:30 o'clock mass in St. Mary's Pro-Cathedral. On the afternoon of the same day a reception will be tendered him in the Academy of Music by the Catholic women of the diocese, at which an address of welcome will be made. The prelate will respond. In the evening the men of the diocese will tender another reception. Addresses will be delivered by prominent laymen.

SPURNED MAN KILLS WOMAN AND HIMSELF

FRANKLIN, N. H., Sept. 19.—Louis Cote, driver of an ice cart in this city, early to-day shot and killed Mrs. Nellie (Clark) Pennock, who conducted a boarding house here, and then cut his own throat with a razor and fell dead beside his victim.

Cote had known Mrs. Pennock for a long time. It is supposed that he was in love with her, but that she did not care for him. Cote, a few weeks ago, went to board at her house. Mrs. Pennock ordered him to leave last night as he had been drinking and causing her annoyance.

Just what happened to-day will never be known, but the facts seem to be as follows: Cote started to work as usual, but a little after 7 o'clock was to Mrs. Pennock's house and he quarrel which had started the night before was resumed. Cote began to upbraid Mrs. Pennock, and also again ordered him to leave.

HALT CALLED ON FREE PHONES TO ALDERMEN

PUBLIC OPINION FORCES THE COMMISSION TO SUGGEST TRUST GRAFT CEASE.

Public indignation over the disclosures made regarding the relations of the Telephone Trust with politicians has been felt at the State House. The trust's connections with officeholders and other men prominent in politics was recently investigated by the Grand Jury, and District Attorney John B. Moran caused a great scare at City Hall by summoning aldermen and city officials to the Court House in a drove.

It had been stated previously by a high telephone Trust official that ten per cent. of the money carried on the construction payroll represented a spoil of graft. Ten per cent. of the employes, he said, were put on the payroll to please politicians and never did little or no work in return for the salaries or wages they drew.

Commission Sends Letter.

The latest blow dealt, in deference to public opinion against such proceedings, came in the form of a letter from the Highway Commission to President Sherwin of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company. It contained recommendations as to what the Telephone Trust should do and the recommendations are suggested because of scandalous disclosures. The Highway Commission says that the Telephone Trust ought to:

First—Discontinuance of the practice of furnishing frank books except to officers and employes of the telephone company and to officers of other telephone companies.

Second—Discontinuance of furnishing free telephones except to officers and employes of the company, charitable institutions, and such as may be necessary for maintenance of the plant of the company.

Third—That quarterly reports to the commission be made by the company, containing names of all persons to whom frank books or free telephones have been furnished, said reports to be open to public inspection.

Fourth—Inception of the same merit system in selection of employes in underground construction or street work as apparently obtained in other departments of the company, and consequent permanent discontinuance of employment of men through political influence who do not render an equivalent for the wages they receive.

Fifth—Readjustment of all discounts to municipalities to a uniform basis.

Says Law Violated.

It has been disclosed that seven Boston aldermen had free telephone service and the fourth recommendation revives interest in the admission that the trust liquidated political debts by paying ward heelers wages that are never earned.

In the letter to President Sherwin, the Highway Commission practically states that it had to take this step because the trust was guilty of improper practices and that some of the disclosures showed violations of law.

TIMEKEEPER IS KILLED BY TRAIN

Henry A. Linton, a timekeeper employed at the Fore River yards, was instantly killed by a freight train near the Weymouth Landing depot while on his way to work to-day. Linton stepped down an embankment and did not see the train approaching. His body was terribly crushed. Linton was thirty-two years of age, unmarried and lived on Commercial street, Weymouth.

Peril of the Public From Railway Greed Revealed by Wreck

COMMISSIONER PUTNEY "DON'T KNOW" WHO WHO TO BLAME; PLANS TARDY PROBE.

LEBANON, N. H., Sept. 19.—Though in the gloom of sorrow for the dead and maimed in the Canaan wreck, the people of the State are thankful for the revelations it has brought. They say it has awakened everyone to the conditions imposed by corporation greed on the State. It has revealed the long hours and poor pay of the operators; the dilapidated death trap cars in the service, and the general disregard for the safety and welfare of the passengers and employes.

There is great approval here for the BOSTON AMERICAN'S report revealing the long hours and poor pay of the telegraph operators.

"The AMERICAN did not overdraw the picture in the least," said an operator today. "I have been an employe of the road for twenty years. I received $1 a day at the start, and now, after working twenty years, get but $1.85 a day for twelve hours' work, seven days in the week. In two years I have not had a day, and more than once have worked a double trick, that is full twenty-four hours. In addition to receiving and sending train messages I sell tickets, report, sent the Western Union and have charge of the station. My condition is but similar to others.

"With the long hours and the strain on the men, is it to be wondered at if somebody blunders?"

Another Rule Violated.

According to another operator, the management higher up must be held accountable for the wreck. He said that Brearley was alone while dispatching the fatal message. The rules state explicitly, he said, that more than one man must be in the dispatcher's office at all times. Brearley, it is said, was alone when he sent the dispatch. If the rule had been obeyed, the accident would not have happened, according to all operators seen today.

Railroad Commissioners Henry M. Putney, Arthur G. Whittemore and G. F. Bales traversed the division from Concord to Littleton to-day, stopping at different points to investigate the wreck. The Commissioners stopped at the Fabyan Hotel at Littleton to-night. Talking to an AMERICAN reporter, Commissioner Putney said:

"Don't Know" Who to Blame.

"There will be a public investigation of the wreck Tuesday in the Commissioners' office at Concord. I do not know who was to blame and will not express an opinion on the cause of the wreck until after the investigation."

"Don't you think a division like this should be double-tracked," Commissioner Putney was asked.

"Well, really, I don't know."

"Don't you think a man in your position should know?"

"Well," said Mr. Putney, "I have not thoroughly investigated the case yet."

Asked when he was going to try to learn who was at fault, Commissioner Putney said he hoped to learn the cause at the hearing next Tuesday. Commissioner Putney said no effort had been made by the Commission to question any of the passengers who were in the wreck. This will be done Tuesday, he said.

With the Commissioners at the Fabyan Hotel is General Counsel Barr of the Boston & Maine. He was summoned here to Commissioner Putney, is due to a hearing the Commission will hold in Lisbon to-morrow relative to an accident at that place some time ago.

Statute Disregarded.

The fact that the statutes state explicitly that the Railroad Commissioners, when such wrecks as the one at Canaan occur, shall act promptly, the board has been known, has for no haste in the matter. Chairman Putney's excuse for inaction, that it was "Wait until the end of the election," said one man, "You can rest assured there will be no more Boston & Maine rule in this State." And the ever worked and underpaid employes are taking heart at the feeling expressed in their behalf by their fellow citizens.

Last Body Taken Away.

The last of the wreck victims, Miss Annie St. Pierre, was taken from the morgue at 9:40 last evening for her former home, Isle Verte, P. Q. Miss St. Pierre was a beautiful young girl of but eighteen. When she met her death in the fearful disaster of Sunday morning she was on her way with her brother, Charles St. Pierre, to seek work in the mills of Manchester. Her brother was severely injured and now lies in the Mary Hitchcock Hospital at Hanover. For four hours he was held fast under the wreckage and for two days lingered between life and death. Miss St. Pierre had no other friends in this country, consequently the latter's remains were the last to be identified.

JUGGLE FIGURES, HIDING OIL PROFITS

Standard, was looking after the interests of Standard oil in a Kentucky oil concern.

The enormous profits which are collected annually from the subsidy concern by the New Jersey corporation were brought out in detail, and Fay questioned everyone in Judge Ferris's courtroom by admitting that he had found some of the missing books of the company, which may set further light on the methods by which the "Octopus" was transformed into the present organization in full view of the courts without any change in the "interests" or any one handing in jail.

Acting Comptroller Fay recalled, was pressed by Mr. Kellogg to explain if he could, the source of the 1,000 per cent profits turned in every year to the New Jersey Standard by the C. M. Pratt Investment Company. While Fay floundered around, Mr. Milburn came to his rescue with a statement that the profits came through the Waters-Pierce Oil Company stock, which Pratt, secretary of the New Jersey concern, held in trust for the Standard.

A BELATED CREDIT.

But though these profits had been returned for a period of years, Fay admitted that the stock did not appear in any of the books of the Standard as an asset until 1907, at which behind time the concern was credited with having owned the stock since 1899. This, by the way, was the beginning of the Waters-Pierce puzzle.

And all that you know about it," said Kellog, "is that in 1899 the Standard Oil Company got from the C. M. Pratt Investment Company $177,000 of profit and that this profit increased annually until in 1905 it amounted to $1,852,709?"

"That is so," replied the witness.

Kellogg thereupon switched to the statement of the profits and dividends of the subsidiary companies of the New Jersey concern, brought out the curious details of the transaction between the New York and New Jersey companies.

A MYSTERIOUS PAYMENT.

Fay, reading from the statement, said in 1904 the New Jersey Standard received from the New York Standard $52,908,430.

"What were the net profits of the New York company?"

"As per exhibit, $7,751,160."

Fay read the items of the assets of the Standard of New York from $40,425,000 to $43,170,000, and so noted.

After some figuring, Fay declared that the net profits were:

"Now tell us about the gross liabilities of the New York Standard."

"In 1903, $47,745,325; in 1904, $81,-985,145."

"Quite an increase, wasn't it?" remarked Kellogg.

In reply to the next question Fay said that the accounts receivable of the Standard of New Jersey were about $39,000,000 in 1904.

"And the liabilities of the New York company increased proportionally, didn't they?"

"Yes."

"Now what caused these increases?"

Fay faintly suggested that he would have to examine the books in order that question and Kellogg ordered him to appear at the next session when full with the explanation.

Before he was allowed to go, Fay was again questioned about the records of the liquidating trustees who transformed the alleged outlaw trust into the present organization. He said he had found a few journals and a ledger.

C. M. Pratt, heard the day before, was again a witness and much more entertaining one than on the day before, since he permitted Kellogg to drag from him the interesting details of the Waters-Pierce affair. Kellogg brought out the fact of the original concern having been outlawed, and that the organization of the new company was to take its place. Pratt told how, in 1900, he bought 2,747 shares in trust for the Standard of New Jersey. He didn't know why the Standard made this arrangement, except that it trusted him.

PRATT "UNINFORMED."

"Wasn't it to evade the anti-trust law of Texas?" demanded Kellogg.

Pratt avowed he knew nothing about such conditions, and then plunged forward to the sale of the stock of Van Buren.

"What did you do with the money and note for the stock?"

"I turned the money over to the company and kept the note, which was in my name."

"The long did Van Buren keep the stock?"

"I don't remember. Perhaps about two years."

Pratt, without telling that Van Buren gave a check in favor of John D. Archbold, protested that the sale was a bona fide and a simple business transaction, but could give no reason why the New Jersey Standard, owning a stock that was paying it $1,800,000 profit a year, should sell it for $150,000 cash and a note for the balance, and then, after dividends to the amount of the cash was paid down had been paid back to Van Buren, should again take over the stock.

ORIGINAL TRUST AGREEMENT MADE BY ROCKEFELLERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Following are excerpts from the "original Trust agreement," which Attorney Kellogg, for the government, is trying to get on the records in the Federal court hearing. This agreement was made in 1882:

"The consideration for stock delivered to the trustees shall be the delivery by the latter to the persons entitled thereto of trus certificates equal at par value to the par value of the stock of the several Standard Oil companies so received and equal to the appraised values of the stocks of other companies or partnerships delivered to the trustees.

"It is understood and agreed, however, that the trustees may retain any trust funds in their hands, in addition to the moneys above provided, purchase the bonds and stock of other companies engaged in business similar to that of the Standard Oil Company's on such terms as they may deem advisable and hold them for the benefit of the owners of trust certificates, or sell, assign, transfer and pledge them whenever they may deem it advantageous to the trust.

Original Trustees.

8 "The trustees shall be as follows: J. D. Rockefeller, O. H. Payne, William Rockefeller, J. A. Bostwick, H. M. Flagler, W. C. Warden, Charles Pratt, Benjamin Brewster and John Archbold."—for terms of varying length.

"It shall be the trustees' duty to receive and keep all interests and dividends declared and paid upon any of these bonds, stocks or money's held in trust by them and to distribute all money received from such source. On sales of trust properties, or otherwise, by declaring and paying dividends upon the Standard trust certificates from funds accumulated, which in their judgment is not needed for the trust's use and expenses.

"It shall be the trustees' duty to exercise general supervision over the several Standard Oil Companies or partnerships any portion of whose stock they hold."

Could Elect Themselves.

Stockholders of these companies may elect themselves as directors and officers when they see fit and shall endeavor to have the affairs of all the companies managed and directed in the manner they may deem most conducive to the best interests of the holder of trust certificates.

"Each trustee shall be entitled to a salary not exceeding $25,000 annually, except the president of the board, who may be voted a salary not exceeding $50,000 annually. All salaries and expenses connected with or growing out of the trust shall be paid by the trustees from the trust funds.

"This trust shall continue during the lives of the survivors and survivor of the trustees named in their agreement and for twenty-one years thereafter."

Provision is made, however, for the termination of the trust at any time after the expiration of ten years on a two-thirds vote of the certificate holders, or after one year on a 90 per cent. vote.

WINTON EXHIBIT CREATES INTEREST

The interest taken in the latest Winton product, the six-cylinder, officially known as the Six-Teen-Six, is being exemplified by the large number of visitors to the Winton establishment on the corner of Berkeley and Stanhope streets. Although these cars were placed on exhibition only yesterday afternoon, there was a constant stream of interested visitors.

The exhibit consists of two touring cars, one runabout and one chassis, the latter being one of the finest finished ever seen in this country. It possesses all the earmarks of the best of foreign products in excellency of construction and finish, and is not equaled in appearance by foreign or domestic, yet placed on public view. The touring car is a finely finished affair, being roomy and comfortable, easily seating seven persons, while the runabout is an attractive, natty and slightly racy in appearance.

This exhibit left Cleveland September 2, and before arriving here made stops at Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Newark, New York, Brooklyn and Bridgeport. The aggregation will leave here on Monday and its course westward will be Providence, Middletown, Albany, Troy, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, and thence to Cleveland.

Sales Manager Charles B. Shanks, thus far, has been a better than usual member of the motor trade, is in charge of the exhibit, he being accompanied by Charles H. Smith, Fred A. Shaw, Frank Sealand and James Shorwick, the five S's. The party travels in a special railroad car constructed for this particular work. A similar exhibit in charge of Charles W. Means is now making a tour of the West, touching at Toledo, Detroit, Cincinnati, Louisville, Philadelphia, St. Paul, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle.

Mr. Shanks left this city to-morrow and goes direct to Denver, where he will handle the exhibit from Wednesday next, leaving the Eastern department in the hands of his able assistant Charles W. Smith.

The Winton Six-Teen-Six has already been described in detail in the AMERICAN. Its many excellent points can best be appreciated by an inspection of the chassis, followed by a demonstration of the car itself.

Yesterday afternoon Fred Shaw took the big car up Forest Hill on the high, which is certainly going some.

THUG VICTIM NEAR DEATH

The men escaped in the crowd.

'GREED OF TRUST IN MILK WAR'

Farmers Declare Contractors Are to Blame If 10-Cent Raise Is Made.

FAMINE IS PREDICTED

The Boston Milk Trust in its greed will force the farmers to deliver milk at less prices or cause a milk famine in Boston. The farmers refuse to consider the terms of the Milk Trust and the Trust declares that the farmers must yield or they will not buy their milk. In the meantime District Attorney John B. Moran has begun an investigation which may force the Trust to change its tactics.

"There is no need of the Boston public paying ten cents a quart for milk this Winter and the contractors are to blame if they do," said Stanley H. Abbott, Frank Wilson, N. H., president of the Boston Co-operative Milk Producers' Company, and chairman of the meetings of the contractors and farmers which have been held without result for the past several days in the American House.

Predicts Open Break.

"It is my opinion that there will be an open break between the farmers and the contractors," added Mr. Abbott, who is at the head of the farmers' organization which furnishes the Boston milk contractors with all their milk. "The matter cannot be settled within a few days or this break will occur on October 1, when the present contracts run out. We, the milk producers, will stand for an increase of 10 cents for a can. The contractors have offered 7 cents, but we will not accept it.

"The retail price of milk should not be over 9 cents per quart, even though we farmers get the increase of 10 cents a can which we have asked for and are entitled to.

Contractors Benefit.

"Last year when the retail price of milk was advanced two months per 200 per cent. of the advance, while the contractors got 80 per cent. of the increase, despite the fact that we produced the milk we only got one-fifth of the increase in price.

"This year the contractors agree that they can make an advance of 2 cents a can and then retail the milk at nine cents a quart. Why can't they sell it at nine cent, even though they do pay us the ten cents increase?

"There is no reason why they cannot sell milk at nine cents a quart even though we get the increase we ask. There is no need of soaking the public an extra two cents per quart simply because the contractors have to pay three cents more per can than they now offer. If they persist in this they will make an extra five cents on every can of milk over what they are now making.

Good Paying Business.

"There is a business which pays so well as the delivering of milk. The cutmentors are two getting 50 per cent. on the investment of last year. Why can't they let up on the public and take a little less on the percentage of profits?

"Forty cents a can or no milk is the stand taken by the Grafton Cooperative Milk Supply A. B. Perry of Worcester with milk. The Grafton farmers have been receiving the last night at a mass meeting which they held.

The other milk producers of Worcester county are to hold a mass meeting to-night for the purpose of organizing in Hartford. Hall of the county. It is expected that the farmers will demand more money for the milk there is there is no doubt about it.

"Losing money at present figures," they all say. "If de well say we can't longer sell milk we must sell our cows and calves and get out of business."

SUMMONS TWENTY BEFORE GRAND JURY IN MILK FIGHT

Boston faces the prospect of a milk famine after October 1, unless the investigation which has been started by District Attorney John B. Moran changes the situation before that time.

The joint conference which has been in progress in this city between the contractors and milk producers has adjourned without any agreement being reached as to the scale of prices, and the farmers threaten to cut off supplies after October 1, unless their concessions are granted.

The demands of the farmers for an advance of ten cents on each eight cans of milk has been refused, and they refuse to accept the seven-cent raise offered by the contractors.

Both Sides Firm.

Both sides remain firm in the stand they have taken and the public is apt to suffer as a consequence.

District Attorney Moran has issued summons for both contractors and producers to appear before the Grand Jury on October 3.

Yesterday afternoon the conference of milk men was invaded by inspectors Mc-Garr and Armstrong from police headquarters.

The inspectors remained closeted with the farmers and milk dealers about five minutes, and are understood to have served summonses on the members of both factions.

Just how many summonses were served could not be ascertained as all concerned preserved silence under orders from Mr. Moran.

Twenty Summonses Issued.

It is known, however, that twenty summonses were made out at the main house yesterday in connection with the milk inquiry, and they ordered the recipients to be on hand October 3 to give testimony. Whether all of the summonses were served yesterday is a matter of doubt, but the majority undoubtedly were.

DOOM WOMAN AND BOYS TO DIE AT RIGA

RIGA, Russia, Sept. 19.—Convicted before military tribunals of participation in the rebellion of 1905, twenty-two persons have been sentenced to death.

Several of the condemned are women and nearly half of the others are mere boys of 18 to 20. Their trials were rushed through with a speed which made them little better than mere travesties of justice.

The prisoners had been held so long without hearings that it was beginning to believe the extreme penalty would not be enforced against them.

WOMAN LAWYER'S ARREST DUE TO GIRL'S JEALOUSY

'Man Woman' held at Newburyport as an embezzler.

NEWBURYPORT, Sept. 19.—Bertha A. Goodwin is said to owe her arrest here while dressed like a man to jealousy felt by Miss Wilkins, a society girl of Chicago, but now of Pittsburg. Both Miss Wilkinm and a Miss Lots of Steelsville, O., have lived with the prisoner in the past, and she showered presents upon them as an infatuated swain would upon a sweetheart or a devoted husband upon a wife.

In Pittsburg, where the prisoner is wanted by the police on embezzlement and false pretense charges, she was known as "the man woman." She was the most extraordinary figure of her sex ever seen in the city of steel millionaires and coal. She swaggered through the streets with her hands thrust deep into the side pockets of the double-breasted man's coat that she wore ilk as dashing college youth.

The only characteristic woman's garment that she wore was a skirt. It was very short. Her collar was of the male style and her ties were always masculine and deftly adjusted. Never a bonnet adorned her head. Her hats were always worn by men and her hair was closecropped. Nobody would have suspected her sex if they viewed her from across a table.

Acquired $20,000 in Pittsburg.

It is said that she got at least $20,000 in Pittsburg in various ways. The police say that she established what she called a debt collecting agency there, having offices in the imposing sixteen-story building, and was supposed to be a lawyer. Those familiar with her career state that she studied for the bar in the law office of Judge Coles in Haverhill, although it is not known if she was admitted to practice.

The Pittsburg police accuse her of many misdeeds. They say that she got checks and bills amounting to more than $2,500 to collect for the sisters of the Pittsburg Hospital, and it is charged that she converted it to what she obtained. One of the specific charges against her is preferred by Detective Vinton F. Porter of that institution.

If what the police say is true, her career in Pittsburg was a series of startling adventures. She was first seen there eleven years ago, or when she was twenty-three years old, if she now states her age correctly. Miss Lutz was the companion then. The latter was of the spiritualistic type of beauty. The prisoner, whose business cards bore the name "B. E. Goodwin," lived with the Lutz women in rural land. They were the strangest couple that ever knew, and were the subject of endless talk. Neighbors said it was not good understanding.

Women Adored Each Other.

The women appeared to adore each other. The prisoner adopted a masculine air of protection over the frail little figure, who minced along beside her when ever they were seen in public. Miss Lutz was a fashion plate. Feminine attire was the one mild that the other bought her garments at a cost that it would take a millionaire's income to pay the bills. Once, it is said, the prisoner went to a fashionable department store and bought for Miss Lutz a magnificent robe, paying for it with a night draft on a New York bank for $200. The draft was dishonored and then the prisoner pawned a valuable diamond ring to get the garment for the other woman. She was determined to make an expensive Easter present.

After a few months the two left Pittsburg, and when the prisoner returned the mysterious Miss Wilburn, not Miss Lutz was her companion. Miss Wilburn was an entirely different type of feminine beauty. She is of voluptuous form. For a while they lived in the Hotel Sagler in Pittsburg and then went to Shady avenue to reside. Then they quarrelled and the police think it was over Miss Lutz, who suddenly reappeared upon the stage of Bertha Goodwin's extraordinary life. There was burning jealousy on the part of the other two over the man woman. It is supposed that Miss Lutz left Pittsburg with her but if so, she dropped out of sight thereafter, from all that the police can learn.

A War of Women.

When accusations of criminality against Miss Goodwin began to pour in upon the police they had lost all trace of her, but they hunted up Miss Williams and, it is stated, found her destitute and in jail. The police thought that the Lutz woman had gone with her lover to Newburyport. Still further for Miss Goodwin's affections, from Miss Williams they learned that Miss Goodwin was born in Southern Massachusetts and had been a reporter on a Haverhill newspaper before she went to Pittsburg. They heard that her mother had bought a home in Newburyport. But they could not discover where she was at last time, although it is said they learned that she and Miss Lutz had been seen in many cities and had gone as far West as San Francisco.

But Pittsburg authorities were sure that sooner or later Miss Goodwin would visit her mother in Newburyport. They sent to City Marshal McLean of this city a request reading in substance: "If Bertha A. Goodwin or 'B. E. Goodwin' shows up in your city please let us know at once. We want her here. She is a most criminal deeds." Such a character as Miss Goodwin could not be long in any place without attracting attention, the Pittsburg police guessed aright when they surmised she would come here eventually and a few days ago City Marshal McLean sent word to the Pittsburg police: "She is here. You still want her?" Word came back that the Pittsburg police did, and then Policemen Hayes and Murphy drove to her mother's home, which stands on the banks of the road and the end of State street, and found a feminine attire in bed. They found her in the barn, but when she saw the had been recognized quickly. She was dressed like a man, in overalls and coat.

Her bail bond has been fixed at $600, and she spent the first night after arrest in the county jails, where a cot bed was placed.

"I will not discuss the charges against me at all," said Miss Goodwin. "I am in good spirits and I am confident of by the Newbury police and I am going to fight extradition."

CARROLL OUT FOR WHITNEY; EXPLAINS WHY

"Nothing Can Defeat Him Except His Own Party," Says Springfield Man.

CRIES "DROP CHILD'S PLAY"

SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 19.—James H. Carroll, of this city, has declared in favor of Henry M. Whitney for the Democratic nomination for Governor. He states his reasons as follows:

"So far as I can see, the sentiment is entirely in favor of Mr. Whitney.

"The country look upon him as a man of great energy and ability and they believe he stands for the greatest progress and advance of our State and its people.

"The tendency is at, so far as I have observed, in his direction, and nothing can defeat his election but his own party.

"Wasting Opportunities."

"We have a most excellent chance of winning this year, but as usual, we are throwing away our opportunities and helping the other side and the other side is laughing at us.

"I tell you, we Democrats are wise. Senator Tillman's familiar remark about the well-known capacity of the Democratic party is again, and not for the first time, making itself true in Massachusetts.

"There is a great and widespread feeling among the business men whom I meet in favor of Mr. Whitney, and they are longing for a chance to vote for him. These men, generally speaking, are Republicans, not men who are actively identified with the party, but nevertheless Republicans. They feel that Massachusetts has not had a fair show. It has been industrially hoitted up and has not had a chance to grow and expand in common with other parts of the country. In other words, the Commonwealth has tagged behind the Republican party and has been content to receive whatever the party saw fit to give after everyone else had been served.

"Drop Child's Play."

"They believe the time has come to announce themselves and declare that the State is first, and that the party is a secondary consideration, and that the first duty is the supremacy of our own Commonwealth, no matter what the rest of the party may think about it. And these men, representatives of all walks of life, will settle the selection. They see in Mr. Whitney the chance to give Massachusetts a great advance and a new year of growth and prosperity.

"They are firm believers in reciprocal relations with Canada and they insist upon a thorough revision of the tariff. They have the fullest confidence in the courage, ability and determination of Mr. Whitney, more than any other Massachusetts man, to carry out these policies. If we men of the Democratic party would drop child's play and become united Mr. Whitney can be surely elected."

HISGEN 'HORSE' ON OIL KING

(From the New York World.)

SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 19.—The rural bandsman of Thomas L. Hisgen, successful competitor of the Standard Oil Company and Independence League candidate for Governor, was unduly interrupted yesterday when the blind white horse which was wearily dragging Mr. Hisgen over the farm of his boyhood ran into a tree and hopelessly wrecked the Independence League outfit.

As Candidate Hisgen led his steed by the bridle in the direction of a stable the driver of a Standard Oil wagon, who had witnessed Mr. Hisgen's discomfiture, called out derisively: "The blind leading the blind." Quickly came the retort courteous: "That's all right. The horse is better off than Rockefeller, who hasn't hair enough to be led by."

"Tom" Hisgen Drives Among the Farmers in Heart to Hart Campaign for Governor

Start of novel campaign tour made by Oil Trust foe, who seeks Independence League nomination for Governor.

Mr. Hisgen greeting group of farmers on his wagon trip through western part of State, ready to begin a heart-to-heart campaign talk.

HISGEN

Talks with the People on Anti-Monopoly and Anti-Machine Issues.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 19—Thomas L. Hisgen, candidate for the nomination of Governor on the Independence League ticket, has started on a two weeks' tour in the western part of the State which promises to be unique. He is not speeding from town to town in a fast automobile, meeting a handful of politicians in each place, and hurrying away in order to fulfil the dates of a previously arranged schedule. Instead he is traveling in the good old-fashioned way with a horse and carriage.

It is not a flying trip, but one which Mr. Hisgen is taking leisurely in order that he may meet the farmers and townspeople personally and shake them by the hand. Not more than ten or fifteen miles will be covered in a day, but all along the route Mr. Hisgen will have left the influence of his strong personality and also literature which will set the farmers to thinking.

Monday night Mr. Hisgen was in Westfield, the next night in Chester. He then continues to Becket and from there to Pittsfield, where he will make his headquarters for several days, branching out to the towns in that vicinity.

A BOSTON AMERICAN reporter accompanied Mr. Hisgen on his first day's journey and found it a most interesting one. It was nearly noon when Mr. Hisgen was finally ready to start, owing to the vast amount of literature which it was necessary to store away in the two-seated canopy carriage, which his white horse, "Joe," had been hitched to. "Joe" is not a wonderful horse to look at, but he is a good traveler and will stand without hitching, which is one strong point in his favor.

Start of the Trip.

The start was made from the Four Brothers' Independence Oil Company's plant in West Springfield, Mr. Hisgen being president and manager of the concern. So high was the literature piled in the back seat and under the seat that there was a catastrophe before the town limits had been passed. Several hundred papers toppled over into the road, but they were soon rescued and the journey resumed.

Mr. Hisgen is well supplied with reading matter for the farmers and townspeople, including hundreds of copies of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, containing the article on the Hisgen Brothers' fight against the Standard Oil Company, hundreds of Ridgway's Magazines, pamphlets containing Mr. Hisgen's address before the Legislative Committee on Mercantile Affairs regarding the anti-discriminating bill, and other facts and literature pertaining to the war against the Standard Oil Company.

From West Springfield Mr. Hisgen drove through Montingue and Tatham into Westfield. At nearly every farm along the route he stopped and had a pleasant chat with the farmers. At one farm on the Westfield road he spent half an hour in the field, where the farm hands were at work digging and sorting potatoes. Here he found a well-to-do farmer who said he had known Mr. Hisgen by sight and by reputation for a long time, but had never before had the opportunity to meet him personally. Not only did the man receive a hearty handshake from the aspirant for the Chief Executive's chair, but Mr. Hisgen also shook hands with the man's sons. Mr. Hisgen was highly complimented on the fight he is making against the Standard Oil Company and was told that success was coming his way from the farmer and his sons.

Talks with Farmers.

At Orchard farm there was a gathering of half a dozen farmers and they all stopped work and gathered around Mr. Hisgen while he told them about the anti-discrimination bill and what it would have meant to them and their communities had it passed the last Legislature.

One of the farmers said he came from Granville and was then returning from the city. He was very eager to talk about some of Mr. Hisgen's illustrious fellow neighbors and said it would be read thoroughly. So interested was he in the fact that Mr. Hisgen had a different time to break away and ramble on his visit. In fact the Granville man followed him to his carriage plying him with questions, as was such men as these, Mr. Hisgen remarked to the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, that would make the trip well worth while.

Where the farmers were in the field or away from home, Mr. Hisgen's literature talked with their wives and left them papers and pamphlets for their husbands. The housewives were apparently as pleased to meet Mr. Hisgen as were their husbands, and they were not averse to talking politics either. One of them brought out a pitcher of thick milk with cream, and Mr. Hisgen declared this alone was worth the journey.

At many of the houses Mr. Hisgen made use of the mail boxes and left the literal papers which he thought would attract attention and be read. Before reaching Westfield he turned off from the main road and drove through Union Street, which is one of the finest residence sections of the town. Here there are large tobacco barns and the farmers are very thrifty. Mr. Hisgen talked with scores of them and found them generally interested in his campaign.

One of the farmers remarked to him: "For a long time I have wanted to shake the hand of the man who has the nerve to fight Rockefeller, and you may count on my vote when it comes to election. I am down on trusts, and the Standard Oil is the worst of the lot."

This farmer owns hundreds of acres of land, and although every day in his busy day yet he found time to talk politics in fact in all the out-lying districts Mr. Hisgen found those who read their papers thoroughly and are right in touch with what is going on politically and otherwise.

Greeted at Westfield.

Mr. Hisgen's presence in Westfield last night was soon discovered and for several hours he was the centre of curious gatherings and crowds at the postoffice.

Westfield is one of the towns where the people have benefited by competition in the oil business and the people therefore have a warm place in their hearts for "Tom Hisgen," as they call him. He is well known in the town, and those who knew him brought others to greet him, and so he was kept very busy. Scores of men also called upon him at the hotel, upon learning he was in town.

Mr. Hisgen said last night to the reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN: "I am more than satisfied with the result of my first day's campaign in this section of the State. What I want to do is to get acquainted with the people and have them feel as if they really knew me. In each case I ask them their names and we meet more or less on a social basis. I am certainly surprised to find how closely they have followed my fight against the Standard Oil Company and against monopoly.

"I am going to take my time and devote at least two weeks to this portion of the State. I must have visited fifty farmhouses today and talked with several hundred people, including the informal gatherings in town this evening. I expect to improve on this record, and by the time my trip is over the district should be pretty well canvassed."

Mr. Hisgen left Westfield this morning for Chester and will stop at Worthington, Fairfield, Russell and Huntington en route.

FALL OPENING AT GILCHRIST'S BEATS RECORD

Shoppers Take Advantage of Big Sale At the "Daylight Store."

SEASON'S FINEST GOODS

Thousands of shoppers are to-day throng-ing the "Daylight Store" to take advan-tage of the varied offerings of the Gil-christ Company on the second day of the most auspicious Fall opening in the fifty-three of the firm's existence.

Bedecked with palms, sunflowers and other floral displays suggestive of the autumnal season, the "Daylight Store" is resplendent from top to basement in every kind of Fall finery.

The 1907 Fall opening sale of the Gil-christ Company greatly surpasses that of all previous years. With this great mer-cantile emporium greatly enlarged re-cently by the addition of another large store, the firm has added many new features and has greatly augmented its already complete departments.

Latest Parisian Creations.

An army of buyers have returned from Paris bringing the latest creations in all kinds of women's costumes and millinery. Specialists in all departments have filled the store with the finest and most novel goods the domestic markets offered in their respective lines.

The dazzling array of the season's finest specialties delighted the company's throng of friends at the Fall opening yes-terday, and the firm will hold open house every day this week.

The big fur department is this season enlarged one half, and the display of muffs, boas, fur coats, etc., shown, is a delight to every woman who sees them.

Entirely new models are shown this year in the shoe department, the most re-cent Paris styles being seen. The same is true of ladies' neckwear.

Sole Agent for Peerless Patterns.

Women's shoe gloves, which are highly popular this year, are offered in every shade and make.

The Gilchrist Company is sole agent in Boston for the Peerless patterns, which are so eagerly sought by all ladies who make their own gowns and are at a loss to know how to proceed. These patterns allow for all seams, which is an importation. Em-ployes in this department are during the Fall opening showing every afternoon to ladies seeking information regarding these patterns.

One of the most attractive sections in the great "Daylight Store" is that de-voted to embroideries. The beautiful things found here are of especial interest be-cause of the demand for them as holiday gifts.

There may be found the simplest and the most elaborate, as the taste of the customer dictates, in corset and bust covers, pillow covers, etc.

This department, on the fourth floor, offers free instruction to all in fine needle work.

Dress Goods and Silk.

The most modish and at the same time the most substantial is presented this Fall in dress goods and silks. One of the most novel lines in these is the complete as-sortment of Scotch plaids, more in de-mand this year than ever before. And a magnificent stock of the favorite plaid of the land and clan is offered.

The tempting line of rugs, curtains and up-holsteries are designed to the house fur-nishing department on the fourth floor. In this connection the interior decorators, ar-tificers of all descriptions, cabinet-makers, women and ladies in-attire, as well as house furnishings and specialties in the Gilchrist Fall opening and to the shoppers of Greater Boston.

From yesterday's total to any past season three weeks' receipts would run the Fall River team a close race.

DESPITE STIFF GALE, HARVARD BEATS RECORD

Buffeted by Adverse Winds and Heavy Sea Makes Port Ahead of Schedule.

700 MADE FIRST TRIP

The fortune steamer Harvard of the Met-ropolitan Company's line arrived in port on her first regular trip from New York to-day at 7.45, fifteen minutes ahead of ac-tual schedule, despite the fact that she came through Long Island and Vineyard Haven Sounds she plunged along buffeted by a stiff northeast gale and a heavy sea.

"I would not have gotten the record had there been any need of it," said Captain Lorenzo Crowell the moment the big boat made fast to her dock. "I never saw a better sea way. The gale we faced last night blew anywhere from thirty-five to forty miles an hour, and the sea was very heavy, yet the boat was as steady as a house.

Everyone of the 700 passengers who made the trip were delighted. Sea sick-ness was reduced to the minimum.

Besides her 700 passengers the Harvard brought 600 tons of express freight.

"We can make the run in fourteen hours without half trying," said Captain Crow-well. "If we can get through Vineyard Sound and by Pollock Rip we will have a dense fog. The rest of the way is easy."

"She's the best sea boat I ever saw," de-clared engineer Henry Mackie. "A good engineer who made the run over from New York to Boston last night and is go-ing back again to-night. "I have made the trip just for the sake of the words of a respectful hearing if you desire the above opportunity, provided you cannot and do not wish to take advantage of this opportunity, the above offer is open to Representative Thomas J. Fay, or any Ward 18 Democrat whom you may desig-nate. "Now kindly do not misunderstand me. I have no quarrel with you in any way. Very truly yours, Bartlett's Ward 18 Backer Wants to Know Whitney Delegation's Views.

James A. (Jerry) Watson wants to de-bate with James P. (Jim) Timilty on the Whitney-Bartlett situation. "Jerry's" chal-lenge reads:

"James P. Timilty, Esq., Boston.

"My Dear Timilty:—As leader of the Democratic organization of Ward 18, and heading as you do a delegation to the Democratic State convention in the Inter-est of Henry M. Whitney and against Charles W. Bartlett, whose delegation I head, I hereby respectfully offer you the opportunity of informing the voters from the public platform why you favor Mr. Whitney's nomination as against the nomi-nation of Mr. Bartlett. Your delegation is on the ballot as being unpledged, but it is generally known that you favor Mr. Whitney's nomination.

"I will publicly give my reasons for favoring the nomination of Mr. Bartlett at the rally that is to be held at the Dudley Street Opera House, Friday even-ing, September 20. "I will guarantee you a respectful hearing if you desire the above opportunity, provided you cannot and do not wish to take advantage of this opportunity, the above offer is open to Representative Thomas J. Fay, or any Ward 18 Democrat whom you may desig-nate. "Now kindly do not misunderstand me. I have no quarrel with you in any way. Very truly yours,

TWO KILLED BY CARS IN LOWELL

LOWELL, Sept. 19.—Two persons are dead as a result of railroad accidents here last night, one on the steam road, the other on the trolley line.

An unidentified woman was run over and instantly killed by a city-bound electric car on First street, and Albert Uddell of No. 12 Main street fell beneath the wheels of a freight train at the Lincoln street cross-ing and was nearly cut in two. The woman was lying on the car tracks and was not seen by the motorman until too late to stop his car, and the man was attempting to cross between two freight cars when the train started.

$236,000 LOST, ARRESTS PEND

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Attorney B. F. Norris of Brooklyn, who offered $15,000 reward Monday for a cash box, said to contain $196,000 in money and $40,000 in gems, which, he asserts, a woman client left on a New Haven train, says he has two men under surveillance to-day and expects to have one arrested soon.

Inspector McCafferty in charge of the detective bureau, is authority for the statement that the mysterious woman is Mrs. H. M. George, a guest at the Hol-land House. The hotel management de-nies, however, that she is registered there.

DEUTSCHLAND IN GREAT RUN

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The Hamburg-American liner Deutschland is due at Sandy Hook about 2 o'clock this after-noon. The liner was in wireless communi-cation with Siasconset, Mass., station, at 9.15 last night. It was at that time 180 miles east of Nantucket South Shoals lightship. Assuming that it passes Sandy Hook at 2 o'clock, it will have made the run from Cherbourg in five days and about twenty-one hours, an average speed of nearly 22½ knots an hour, not quite equalling, however, the average record of the Cunarder Lusitania.

"WILLIAMS VIOLATED HIS TRUST"

—Henry M. Whitney

Merger Candidate Declares He Sold People's Interests in the West End.

"FOR MESS OF POTTAGE"

The gubernatorial fight between fac-tions of the Democracy of Massachusetts is growing in intensity hourly and Henry M. Whitney, the Merger candidate, added fuel to the flames by a speech in New Bedford last night in which he attacked George Fred Williams, who is support-ing General Charles W. Bartlett for the nomination, in bitter terms. Mr. Whitney said in part:

"Professing himself to be the embodi-ment of public virtue, Mr. Williams hasn't the slightest conception of what public virtue is. In the West End matter he was willing to barter away the interests of the poor people of the city for a mis-erable mess of pottage for himself. It was this which led him, in violation of his honor and of the trust imposed upon him by the Democratic party of Massach-setts, to do what he could to place the national party upon the platform of a depreciated currency which sent it to a disastrous defeat.

"It was this which caused him on the floor of the convention to insult that idol of the Democracy, that young, able, be-loved and revered statesman, the late la-mented William E. Russell—the latche-et of whose shoes he was not worthy to un-loose—and to break his heart and bring him to an untimely grave.

Although President Charles S. Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad showed, in a letter to a well-known organization, that he feels how strong and general is the public opinion against permitting his road to take over the Boston & Maine system by saying in effect, "We want the road and mean to get it, but can afford to wait," General Charles W. Bartlett and others who are opposed to putting all transportation in New England into the hands of a monopo-ly, are not deceived by this attempt to eliminate from public discussion a ques-tion on which the merger candidates now fully realize they have taken the unpopu-lar side.

In his speech at Springfield last night he declared that the merger is still an is-sue, and that it could not be dropped. "First," he said, "they tried to ignore it, and after being forced to a discussion have seen that they are fighting the people of the State and opposition, and now try to get rid of a losing topic even by going to the length of having President Mellen say that it is not to be pushed.

'WHITNEY WILL WIN'--BUCKLEY

Daniel F. Buckley, campaign manager for Henry M. Whitney, issued a statement to-day in which he predicted an over-whelming victory for Mr. Whitney over Mr. Bartlett in the fight for nomination. There are 750 of the 847 delegates to the State convention.

Rich Railroad Contractor Jailed With His Affinity by Angry Wife

Woman Tells Remarkable Story of Love and Desertion and Long Chase.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—A remarkable story of love and devotion, only to be deserted as a reward and a long three years' chase after the man who left her for a store girl, who he claimed to be his affinity, is that told by Mrs. Elizabeth Evans Hirsch, the beautiful wife of Patrick Hirsch, who had both her husband and his affinity arrested at their magnificent apartments in the fashionable Warwick Arms.

It is because of the remarkable attitude of Miss Yeargain's mother after Mrs. Hirsch had caused the arrest of the pair and had told how they had kept her little boy from her, taught him to call Miss Yeargain "mother" that the case is one of the strangest ever brought into a New York police court. It is more than striking in this respect than the Earle case.

"It is a crime to arrest my daughter and Mr. Hirsch," said the mother of the girl. "I have consented to live here with them because I know they love one another deeply. Mr. Hirsch loves my daughter, and he does not love his wife. I understood all along that my daughter was not married to Mr. Hirsch, but I could pardon the conditions because their two souls were one. They loved each other dearly, and it is not right to interfere with such love."

Mrs. Yeargin's belief in this theory does not alter the fact that during the past six weeks Mrs. Hirsch has been in this city calmly directing a force of detectives, who are ready to go into court and testify that, particularly since the first of September, when the law dealing with all cases similar to this one became operative, Miss Yeargain has been posing as the Warwick Arms as Mrs. Patrick Henry Hirsch.

The accused pair are now at liberty under $500 bail each, pending a further examination in the West Side Court. If they are found guilty, they may be punished by a fine of $500 each and six months' imprisonment.

Mrs. Hirsch's detectives are so confident that they do not believe Hirsch or his affinity will be in court when the case is called. They think the bail will be sacrificed.

P. H. Hirsch is the leading spirit in the Interurban Company of the Broad Exchange Building, and it is said that, even while he has been making contracts in various cities for the building of big trolley roads, he has taken his affinity along and introduced her to all of his financial friends as the real Mrs. Hirsch.

After the arrest of her husband and Miss Yeargain, Mrs. Hirsch was found in her apartments in the Hotel Endicott, only a block away from the Warwick Arms, and she was on the verge of hysterics over the notoriety that had come to her.

"I would never have done this except for my little boy," she sobbed. "They kept him away from me so long and he taught him to call that woman 'mother,' I simply had to act. But two weeks ago, at the very time this new law went into effect, they made a desperate plan to steal the lad from my home in Milledgeville, Ga., and had it not been for my detectives being there to prevent just such a move I might now be searching the whole country for him, as I have had to do before this.

"Really, I have no desire for all this to get into print, but since some of the facts are known I would like to have it understood just what led up to my action.

"It is all nonsense for Miss Yeargain's mother to talk about their two souls being one, or to say they are affinities. This is a case of cold, hard facts, and if Miss Yeargain doesn't know it, she can easily find out that there is yet another woman in the case whom my husband has been in the habit of visiting."

Miss Ruby Yeargain, "affinity" of Patrick Hirsch, wealthy railroad contractor.

Mrs. Hirsch, who has invoked new law in order to bring her husband to terms.

MORE ARRESTS DUE IN CAPITOL GRAFT EXPOSE

Former State Treasurer Mentioned in Sensational Pennsylvania Probe.

4,000 PER CENT. PROFITS

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 19.—More warrants are momentarily expected against a second list of contractors, former State officials or both, accused of complicity in the capitol graft for alleged connection with which fourteen prominent Pennsylvanians were arrested and compelled to give bond yesterday.

Attorney-General Todd is not at all specific with interviewers.

"Others than those already named may be proceeded against later," is all he says.

Former Auditor-General Thorstenberg and Former State Treasurer Harris are two of the individuals whose names figured prominently during the graft investigation who are not yet included in the proceedings. The accusations against the men arrested yesterday included the following:

John H. Sanderson, contractor, fifteen counts. He supplied most of the capitol furnishings. His contract amounted to $3,487,950.65 and his profit in some instances is said to have been 4,000 per cent.

Joseph M. Huston, architect, thirty counts. He designed the capitol from plans which, it is charged, were stolen from Edward Lewis Cobb, and his commissions were $415,653.91.

Congressman H. Burd Cassel, fifteen counts. As treasurer of Pennsylvania Construction Company supplied metallic furniture to value of nearly $4,000,000.

Lemuel P. Kinnear, Wallis Bolton, J. G. Neideerer and C. K. Storm, stockholders in Pennsylvania Bronze Company, charged with supplying inferior material for $2,000,000.

"The accused capitol grafters' immediate indictment and a special term of court to try them is my program," said Deputy Attorney-General Cunningham to-day.

"No political, financial or other influence can stop me. The State treasury's looting has given Pennsylvania an evil name, but speedy punishment of the offenders will

Boston American Daily Home Magazine

Rose Pastor Stokes, Millionaire's Wife, Gives Advice to Girls

ROSE Pastor Stokes, wife of Millionaire J. G. Phelps Stokes, will be writing a series of letters of advice to the worried and the perplexed of the East Side of New York. Through the courtesy of Abraham Cahan, editor of the Jewish Daily Forward, the BOSTON AMERICAN is enabled to present to its readers Mrs. Stokes's letter and that to which it is the reply.

Mrs. Stokes receives no remuneration for these letters, her sole motive in writing them being to try to bring heartease to those who are groping for a guide.

A Mother's Question

AS I see from your announcements and editorials our dear comrade, Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes, will answer some of the letters sent to the Forward, may I hope that the question which has been weighing on my mind for over a year will be one of the lucky ones to be turned over to her?

I have a daughter, and she is the pupil of my eye. She is my all in all. I got no education myself. My parents were poor people in Russia, and I had to work ever since I was twelve years old. I cannot read nor write; even this letter has to be written for me by somebody else; but I understand the value of education.

Since I began to attend Socialist meetings my eyes have been opened. I wish I could return to my younger days when I was a silly little girl and spent my time in all kinds of foolishness.

But then there were no meetings for lectures in Russia to my knowledge. Now Socialism is the only comfort I have in life, except my daughter, and it has shown me the importance of knowledge. But it is too late for me. So all my hopes are for my daughter.

She is nearly fifteen now, and she goes to high school; and a bright, good girl she is. She passes from class to class with excellent marks, and her teachers say she is very smart and good.

Both my husband and I have got to work hard for a living, and yet our daughter has never seen the inside of a factory or a shop. I want her to be educated and to get those benefits which her mother did not get. But there is one thing which is bothering me, and this is what I want Mrs. Stokes to advise me upon:

I have a relative in New York and she is making fun of me for regarding myself in order to give my daughter an education. "You are an ungrateful, plain woman," she says, "and when your daughter grows up to be an educated lady she will look down upon you and be ashamed of you. You were a working girl, let her go to work also, then she will know how to appreciate her mother."

Is that thing she says to me is that poor people with an education are worse off than without it. If I send my child to college she says she will be miserable there unless she has money for fine dresses and all kinds of thing. I say that she can be in school teacher, and that thousands of poor Jewish families send their children to college, but my relative keeps on laughing at me and says that my girl, when she is an educated lady, will be just like a duckling hatched by a hen. The duckling can swim, and the hen sits foolishly on the river bank vainly calling to her that she can swims away from her own mother.

Sometimes I feel scared that there's a good deal of truth in all this, and it worries me very much. Will you ask Mrs. Stokes to answer this letter and tell me what she thinks of it? She will oblige many

A WORRIED MOTHER.

Mrs. Stokes's Reply

IF all the "uneducated, plain" women should followed such advice as "A New York relative" is giving "a worried mother," where would the world be to-day as regards progress? It is, perhaps, mainly because of the efforts, through all the generations of just such "plain, uneducated" mothers that we have stepped forward and reached upward and outward with some measure of success.

It may be that we should have got no further than the ape, if it had not been for the all-consuming desire of the mothers of the human race to make possible for their children the taking advantage of education not afforded in their time by their own day.

Thus the world of men will some day be grown to manhood, and we shall have the mothers, in large measure, to thank for it.

There are many young men and women (unfortunately too many) who, after they get a smattering of book-knowledge in the city, the fortunate parents have not, look down upon their fathers and mothers. Even though, in many cases, the parents have made every personal sacrifice to make this knowledge possible for their children.

Yet, all honor to those parents! Never have I known one father or one mother who, in spite of the estrangement, has not looked up to and prized for what he or she has deemed the "education" of the children.

Is Worth While

THE only people education fails to educate are those who seek an education as an end in itself or as a means to enable them to live by their wits alone. All classes send their fair quota of this type to high schools, to men and colleges.

Let "a worried mother" inspire her daughter with lofty motives for seeking an education and she need have nothing to fear. So much to be gained over, in the larger usefulness of the future school teacher.

Such a daughter will the more deeply appreciate any sacrifice made for her.

Handy Things for Housewives to Know

TO clean velvet, it should be laid to water and sponge well all over, washing soak in a basin or jar with a little soft soap and a teaspoonful of soda. When perfectly dry comb all over with linseed oil, letting it soak well into the pile. Roll up and each article about one hour, then rub off left for a few hours, at the end of which time it should be cleaned with a cloth and brushed with a chamois leather and plate brush. This only will require to be done before winter, and the ornaments will always look new.

Never economize when buying mattresses unless it is absolutely impossible to spare the money for good ones. A really good hair mattress will last a lifetime, clean "as good as new" over and over again, and be far more comfortable and wholesome to sleep upon than one filled with cheap mixed material. Blankets are cheap and nice as you can possibly afford, as the cheaper ones, being a mixture of cotton and wool, are far heavier than those made of all wool, and so add unnecessarily to the weight that it should be light in weight.

To save incandescent mantles, when lighting turn on the gas for a few seconds, then hold the match one inch above the burner. A blue flame should appear and the gas not too quickly that so many mantles are destroyed.

Steel fire irons which have become dull should first be wrapped for a day or two in rags soaked in kerosene, then "as good as new" over and over again, and be far more comfortable and wholesome to sleep upon than one filled with cheap mixed material. After that rubbed with a steel burnisher. After that rubbing with the burnisher will gradually bring them back to a greater degree of brightness. Burnishers cost twenty-five cents each, and can be bought at most ironmongers.

PUT GLOVE CLASPS ON WAISTS

A MAN came in the other day with a bright face.

"I have an idea," said he. "Why can't those little clasps used on gloves be put down the back of a woman's waist? All a man would have to do then would be to pull and the thing would be fastened. No more fumbling with buttons that are too big and holes that are too little, or buttons that are too little, holes that are too big and buttons both so needlessly little that would."

A few rapid little pressures and presto! it's done. Why, a man could get so expert that he need simply stroke his finger down the back of his wife's waist to fasten it. What do you think of the glove-clasp scheme, eh? Great, isn't it?

And the man went promptly told that it was great, and that it was just like man's luck to have thought of it. Many of his suffering instead of putting up with it year after year an uninitiative woman probably would.

"Occasionally One of Them Is Worked Too Hard and He Falls by the Wayside, a Piteous Sacrifice to Feminine Greed and Ambition"

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL

DARK AND OILY HAIR

DEAR PROFESSOR:

My hair, which was of a pretty golden brown, has lately turned much darker, and is now more black than brown. Is there any remedy for it? Also, it has become very oily, and I am compelled to wash it every week in order to do it up correctly. I hate black hair and am anxious to know of something that will turn mine back to its original color. H. M. W.

THE use of a little peroxide of hydrogen will lighten your hair; or you might try salts of tartar, a teaspoonful in each water while washing it, as well as a teaspoonful of lemon juice in the rinse water. None of these can injure the hair and will probably, after faithful using for some time, give you the desired shade. Do not use too much of the peroxide, but try the other first. Common cooking soda is also a good brightener of the hair, and all the suggestions given are with a view to lessen the oily condition as well as to improve the color.

TAKE SHORT WALKS.

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly inform me if, after standing all day, long walks are good to take after dinner?

BONNIE.

AFTER you have stood upon your feet all day it is wise to find some other means of exercise than walking, although a different set of muscles is brought into play in walking than in standing still, in sweet milk for twenty-four hours and Let the walks be short, however, and if strained, are good whiteners for the face.

THREE REQUESTS

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly tell me what will reduce my weight? I would also like to know what is the best thing for freckles, and what would suit for my face? P. F. R.

PLENTY of exercise and dieting will help greatly to reduce weight. This was thoroughly discussed on this page last Saturday. Electricity is the only sure and quick cure for freckles. Lemon juice and buttermilk, as well as horseradish soaked

"THE TURN OF THE BALANCE"

A Thrilling Story of American Life by Brand Whitlock

CHAPTER XI.—Continued.

(Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner.)

THE policeman looked at her boldly, and then he took her round arm in his big hand and turned her round to the open door.

"Inspector," he said, "this girl wants to see her brother. What's the name?" he asked, again turning to Gusta.

"Koerner, sir," said Gusta, speaking to the second inspector, Archie Koerner.

Inspector McKee, an old officer, who had been on the police force for twenty-five years, eyed her suspiciously. His short hair was dappled with gray, and his nose and cheeks were clipped smartly and severely on a level with his upper lip. Gusta had even a greater fear of him than of the rest of the policeman, who now released his hold of her arm. Instinctively she drew away from him.

"Archie Koerner, eh?" said the inspector in a gruff voice.

At the desk, a huge man, swart and hairy, in civilian's dress, standing by one of the big windows, turned suddenly and glowered at Gusta from under thick black eyebrows. Slowly she drew her head and closely clipped, bristled almost low enough on his narrow forehead to meet his heavy eyebrows.

He had a flat nose, and beneath, half encircling the wide, open mouth, was a black mustache, stubbed and not much larger than his eyebrows. His chin was square and heavy. A gleam showed in his small black eyes and gave a curiously sinister aspect to his black visage.

"What's that about Koerner?" he said, coming forward aggressively. Gusta shrank from him. She felt herself in the midst of powerful, angry foes.

"You say he's your brother," asked the inspector.

"Yes, sir."

Police Methods

"What do you want of him?"

"Oh, I just want to see him, sir," Gusta said. "I just want to talk to him a minute—that's all, sir."

Her blue eyes were swimming with tears. Holding on a minute, like the man of the dark visage. He went up to the inspector, whispered to him a moment. The inspector nodded, nodded, then took up a tube that hung by his desk and blew into it. Far away a whistle shrilled.

"Let this girl see Koerner," he said, speaking into Koska's presence. Then, dropping the tube, he said to Gusta:

"Go downstairs—you can see him."

He turned away, and the man with the arm again, and led her down the hall and down the stairs to the prisoners' quarters. A turnkey unlocked a heavy door and tugged it open; inside was a dim, ventilated hall. Gusta saw a dim gas jet burning. The turnkey called:

"Koerner!"

Then he turned to Gusta and said:

"This way."

She went timidly into the vestibule and found herself facing a heavy door, crossed with iron bars. In the other side of the bars was the face of Archie.

"Hello, Gusta," he said.

She had lifted her skirts a little; the floor seemed to her unclean. The odor of disinfectants, which, strong as it was, could not overpower the odors which it was intended to annihilate, came strongly to her. Through the bars she had a glimpse of high whitewashed walls, pierced near the top with narrow windows dimly beyond all gone. On the other side was row of cells, their barred doors now swinging open.

Along the walls miserable figures were stretched on a bench. Far back, where the prison grew dark as night, other figures were huddled, and she saw strange, haggard faces peering curiously at her out of the gloom.

"Hello, Gusta," Archie said.

She felt that she should take his hand, but she disliked to thrust it through the bars. She did so. In slipping her hand through to take Archie's hand it touched the iron, which was cold and soft, as if with some foul grease.

"Oh, Archie," she said, "what has happened?"

"Search me," he said. "I don't know what I'm here for. Ask Detective Kouka."

Gusta turned. The black visaged man was standing by, while glared at the detective in open hatred, and Kouka sneered, but controlled himself, and looked away as if, after all, he were far above such petty things.

Then they were silent, for Gusta could not speak.

"How did you hear of the pinch?" asked Archie, presently.

"Why, Archie was in—she told us," replied Gusta.

"What did the old man say?"

"Oh, Archie! He's awful mad!"

"Well, I'm sorry," he said, meditatively fitted the toe of his boot into one of the figures pressed into the iron grating at the bottom of the door.

"See, Gusta," he said, "you tell him I'm in wrong, will you? Honest to God, I am!"

He raised his face suddenly and held it close to the bars.

"I will, Archie," she said.

"And how's ma?"

"She is pretty well." Gusta could not say the things she wished; she felt the presence of Kouka.

"Say, Gusta," said Archie, "see Mr. Marriott; tell him to come down here; I want him to take my case. I'll work and pay him when I get out. Say, Gusta, you went on, "tell him to come down this afternoon. My God, I've got to get out of here! Will you? You know where his office is?"

"Yes," said Gusta.

"It's in the Wayne building."

Not Fit for a Dog

Gusta tried to look at Archie; she tried to keep her eyes on his face, on his tumbled yellow hair, on his broad shoulders, broader still because his coat and waistcoat were off and his white throat was revealed by his open shirt. But she found it hard, because her eyes were constantly challenged by the sights about her—the foul floors, the men sleeping off their liquor, the restless figures that haunted the shadows, the white faces peering out of the gloom, the odors that came from within was beginning to sicken her.

"Oh, Archie," she said, "it must be awful to live here!"

Archie became suddenly enraged.

"Awful?" he said. "It's hell! This place isn't fit for a dog to stay in. Why, Gusta, I'll get out of here," he said, "or I'll die. I didn't sleep a wink last night! Not a wink! Gusta," he grasped the bars, pressed his face against them, "see Mr. Marriott, and tell him I'll pay him, he got it here. Will you? See him, will you?"

"Yes, Archie," she said. "I'll go right away."

She was eager now to leave, for she had already turned sick with loathing.

"And, Gusta," he said, "get me some cigarettes and send 'em down by Marriott."

"All right," she said. She was backing away.

"Good-bye," he called. The turnkey was trying the door on him.

Outside, Gusta leaned a moment against the wall of the building, breathing in the outdoor air; presently she went out but it was long before she could cleanse her mouth of the taste or her nostrils of the odor of the foul air of that prison in which her brother was locked.

Fifth in a Series of Startling Articles Which Raise the Question:

DOES MAN GAIN BY MARRIAGE?

BY "I. O. U."

NUMBER V.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN publishes to-day the fifth portion of the article received from an anonymous writer signing herself "I. O. U."

The article, entitled "Man's Profit and Loss Through Marriage," is remarkable because of the fact that the writer—proved to be a woman by the many delicate touches that only a feminine mind or hand could give—defends man. Is she right?

WOMEN—I mean the modern, new fashioned women—are bored by their husbands.

We don't keep up the pretenses for him as we should. We keep them up for other men. We are interesting to other men—because we take the trouble to be interesting.

But the man who has paid gets cheated every time.

He's put upon shamefully, the best of him is taken, and in most cases he becomes merely a money-making drudge, incapable of feeling and hardened to ill-usage.

Likely enough, then, he is a bore, for you can't expect a man who has had every natural impulse slammed and every foolish desire laughed at to amount to much as a social diversion. He falls back upon stolidity or commonplaceness as a refuge. And in time he does become stolid and commonplace.

Only a Feeble Echo

LEFT to the enjoyment of his bachelor hood he might have proved quite as diverting as any of them. It's matrimony and a wife that have done for him. He's been mulled and pinned and pinned to the point of extinction. In most cases he's only a feeble echo of the wife who has made him.

Too I beg of you, blame your husband, dear lady. Blame yourself. It's your own obvious work that has accomplished his ruin.

A clever wife has it in her power to do anything with a man that he chooses to do. And most wives are clever, otherwise they wouldn't be married.

A married man is what his wife believes him to be. That's why so many of them make money. Occasionally one of them is wrecked on the hard and he falls by the wayside, a piteous sacrifice to feminine greed and ambition.

Where Wives Fail

BUT, as I have said before, it isn't altogether an absorption of his wife's goods of which we are guilty. Perhaps he's charitably inclined, anyway, and the money might as well go to us, who have no earned it, as to an orphans' home or the betterment of public libraries.

It's the taking up of every vital interest he has outside of business, bashing it over and stamping upon it, for which we ought to be strung up and choked until black in the face.

What right have we got to do it?

What right, for instance, have we to frown upon a harmless game of golf? Why don't we go ourselves? Why won't we as enthusiastically fish and picnic, play tennis, ride bicycle and climb a mountain with the man of our choice as, for instance, with the man of some other woman's choice?

Wherein lies the difference?

We won't go ourselves and we won't let him go if we can help it.

Or, supposing we do go. Then I'll warrant we'll find some other way to make the day a misery.

Little hardships that in the company of some other man would be regarded as merry incidents are in his company made personal grievances.

Oh, I know! I've been there, too. Isn't it only too true?

Picture of Life

HOW often—how very, very often—have we seen them, the man and his wife off for a "lark." Well, they might just as well have stayed at home, as she wished, for by the very faces of them you can tell that something bad has gone wrong.

The husband, as usual, wears that helpless, apologetic look—or, perhaps, by now it has crystallized into that sullen mien, and the wife's head is held high, eyes blazing and lips tightly closed against any possible explosion of her righteous indignation.

It's going to be just a glorious outing, with whom she is on much better terms, I'll guess, than with the husband of her bosom.

One wonders, always, why she didn't marry the friend instead of the husband. It's quite plain that the husband would be better pleased. That is, it's quite plain to us. She doesn't for a moment suspect his true feelings.

Buttons That Are Height of Fashion

BUTTONS have been rather more in elegance until lately, always on both the big, handsome sort which form distinctive features for picturesque wraps and gowns, and which never go out of fashion these days.

At present buttons of bright silver, which greatly resemble nail heads, and are about the same size, are grouped upon gowns, forming small stars or irregular curves and outlines. Such ornaments were recently used on a very pretty gown of cloth gown. The buttons were imbedded in what is known as baby chiffon, and the bands were used upon the skirt and waist.

Another gray costume was outlined with platinum buttons piped with black and studded with miniature button stars at intervals. These buttons are very flat and can be closely applied to cloth or chiffon. There are white enamel buttons which closely resemble white linen. They are used in groups of three, striped and cross bars, all in white with wide, narrow shanks to sew them securely to the garment.

One soon wearies of dangling tassels and ball fringe, and the effective trimming which can be accomplished with buttons seems never to be entirely laid aside, though quite possible that the new ones were so extensively used as at the present time for design effects.

Fortunes Told by Fingernails

FINGERNAILS are said to foretell your disposition and future. A white spot on the thumbnail is a promise of a present, while if it is on the index finger it is to tell you that you are going to make a new friend. A white spot on the middle finger warns you of a coming enemy; on the fourth finger it indicates the arrival of a letter, or, better still, a sweetheart; and a spot on the little finger means, this is said, that you will take a journey shortly. Big, irregular spots tell you that your digestion is bad, and lines that split easily are said to betoken bad health. Corrugated nails betoken a pessimistic mind.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

TROUBLE FOR BOTH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man twenty years old and keep company with a girl of my own age, and she has a little trouble about me with her folks. I would like to have it settled, so I ask your advice. She is a nice girl here me, and I love her. J. M. O.

A VERY manly thing to do would be to call on the girl's parents and tell them just what you have told me. If they see that you are honest in your motives and intentions, perhaps their objections to you may be overcome.

WHO IS PROPER?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

When you receive a box of candy from a gentleman friend is it proper to open it and eat it all until he has gone? A. B. C.

IT is both proper and the nice thing to do to open the young man's present and offer him, as well as all others who are in the room, a share of your pleasure.

A COMPLICATTD CASE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I had been going out with a young man for the past six weeks, but know nothing of his intentions toward me.

He has always been there when I was in wrong, will you? Honest to God, I am!"

He raised his face suddenly and held it close to the bars.

"I will, Archie," she said.

"And how's ma?"

"She is pretty well." Gusta could not say the things she wished; she felt the presence of Kouka.

USE THIN PAPER FOR LETTERS

ONCE it was good form to make use of extremely thin and lined stationery only for foreign letters. Now, since the automobile keeps people constantly on the move, it is quite correct to use it for home use, especially by one's correspondence, and some very smart notepaper is although he seemed to care for my company, as he lived quite some distance from home and called only to see me about three or four times during the week.

One day we had a misunderstanding, and I really could not say who was to blame, as matters were so complicated that I couldn't explain how it had happened.

Now, what I would like to know is this: Will it be proper for me to invite him to a wedding that I am to be maid of honor in?

I have met him several times since and he seems willing to make up, but I attempt to speak to me. The fact is, he is very independent, and I am likewise; but since we are both in the wrong I have grown to think very much of him. I have only one girl friend, and I would much rather invite this particular person.

Is it proper for a maid of honor to invite a man to the ceremony?

L. M. R.

IF you are not quite sure who was to blame in the disagreement, it would do no harm to give the young man an opening to renew his former relation with you by writing him a note, but under no circumstance must he very certain that in doing so you will not be placing yourself in any way.

It is quite proper to wear a hat when acting as maid of honor.

CHAPTER IV.

THOROUGHLY aroused, I swung a vicious blow, blindly. I hit nothing.

My matches were very few now. I did not wish to fail more, lest I be left without, for the night. I therefore ran to the reception room where I had left my coat, and got a copy of the evening paper.

Now, I said to myself I'll see you.

I struck a match; it was blown out by the mysterious enemy, and a handful of fine dust flung in my face. I backed out of the refrigerator, swung the door to, and put my back against it.

Whoever he is, I thought, he can't get out.

I confess I was thoroughly frightened and that my fingers shook as I struck a match. This time there was no interference and the paper blazed up.

"Now I'll get you!" I exclaimed, flinging the door wide, drawing my revolver, holding the torch high above my head and advancing.

The light illuminated the refrigerator from end to end. There was no one there!

All silent now as the grave, with the cold hand, and my torch was extinguished.

An Icy Hand

Thoroughly roused, anger taking the place of fear, I dropped the torch and rushed about the refrigerator, striking with my revolver butt and clenched fist, hoping to drive my assailant to a corner.

Although I felt the icy hand touch my forehead several times in my mad pursuit, I hit nothing, but empty space in my frenzy, so that, despairing of getting my tormentor, I backed out of the place, receiving a last touch as I went, and bolted the door first.

When I gasped, when again in the reception room, I dropped into a comfortable seat, thoroughly exhausted, and that Zara was here.

In spite of my common sense, the mysterious antagonist in the refrigerator, combined with the story of the caretaker, the presence of the rats and the silence of the deserted household, was working on my nerves.

To strengthen my control of myself, I drew a plan of the cellar of the wierd old house.

Absorbed in drawing the plan, from memory, I did not notice, until it was nearly completed, that the light in the reception room had rapidly waned and that the afternoon was giving place to twilight.

Shadows

It seemed to my excited imagination that the room teemed with shadowy figures.

With difficulty I restrained an almost overwhelming impulse to run out of the house, and laughed at myself for the impulse. But I went to the front reception and reassured myself that help was at hand if needed.

At the door I received a momentary shock, at the sight of a dark form darting from the veranda into the grass. A collection of grotesques on the veranda dispelled my fear as I realized the form was that of a terrified grocer's boy, who had brought provisions Lynch ordered.

I spent considerable time on the veranda, eating, smoking, and collecting my thoughts. It was nearly dark when I returned to the reception room, fortified, for anything that might come.

Now, Mr. Man, I spoke aloud for the relief of hearing a voice, you are going to stay here all night and solve this mystery in the morning. When you do solve it you will probably laugh at the whole thing—and yourself as well.

"As well!"

Voice or Echo?

I listened. Was it a voice or an echo? Well? I inquired.

"Well?" It was an echo.

I laughed, being reassured, and the echo replied merrily.

I think you and I would feel better for a fire, I said.

"For a fire!" said the echo cheerfully.

Thereupon, I piled all of the channel coal and a heap of wood and kindling together in the fireplace in the centre of the reception room, touched it off, and soon had a blaze roaring up the chimney.

All fear banished, I began to consider the facts in the case.

After half an hour's thought, I was dismayed to find I was making deductions, contrary to Zara's teaching.

Well, retire for the night, I remarked to the echo, taking up a candle—Lynch had sent a dozen from the grocer's—and started up the staircase from the reception room.

At the top of the stairs, I followed a hall that led straight to the front of the house and entered a room opening on my right. There I found an old-fashioned bed, a canopied, mahogany affair, amply supplied with bed clothing.

Without undressing, I threw myself down and fell asleep.

Lying upon my left side, as I fell asleep I was looking directly at the wide old fashioned fireplace, dimly outlined by the light of the candle on the shelf above it.

With a sense of comfort, as I closed off, I heard the roar of my fire in the reception room crackle. The sound was remarkably clear. It came apparently through the fireplace on my right hand corner of the reception room, up the chimney to the fireplace at which I was staring.

Suffocating

Presently I felt myself growing strangely rigid. I tried to raise my right arm; it refused to obey; I struggled to turn on my back; I could not! My breath came in gasps and I heard the pounding of thousands of anvils in a fantastic harmony! I stared wildly about. It was pitch dark! The candle had gone out! I could not move! I was slowly suffocating! The air seemed too thick and heavy to breath! My only hope for life was a window—fresh air!

By sheer will power I forced myself to a sitting position and felt out of bed inch by inch, I fought death to the front window! I pounded weakly on the glass, endeavoring to smash the pane! I could not! With a crash I fell back to the floor. The last thing I recollect seeing, was the beady green eyes on the sill of the window sill above my head! I gave a cry for help.

To Be Continued.

JAPAN WILL ANNEX KOREA, END BUTCHERY

TOKIO, Sept. 19.—To put a stop to what the Mikado believes will otherwise be 18 terminable warfare with Korean malcontents, Japanese statesmen admit that their country will almost certainly annex the hermit kingdom in the near future.

While discontent will doubtless continue for some time in any event, the Japanese think there will be less trouble in suppressing native Korean uprisings if they are relieved from the necessity of acting nominally through another government.

With roving Korean bands under discharged soldiers scouring the entire country, killing the Japanese police, railway officials and civilians, as well as every Korean suspected of Japanese sympathies, the situation, it is declared, is becoming too serious to continue.

Just now bands of insurgents are gathering around Seoul threatening an attack upon the capital itself. It is not definitely known how strong the force has become, but no doubt exists that a large number of rebels is sufficient to constitute a serious menace to the Mikado's garrison.

Several villages have been completely wiped out by Japanese troops as a punishment for the murder or mistreatment of Japanese officials. A battalion of reinforcements from Japan arrived at Fusan yesterday and more are on the way. Thus far the losses among the Japanese soldiers have been trifling, but it is believed that thousands of the Korean "rebels" have been killed. While the Marquis Ito is in command only as premier, his rule is really absolute.

TWELVE AUTOS RUINED IN FIRE

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 19.—Twelve automobiles were practically destroyed and a like number badly damaged in a fire which broke out in the interior of the garage and automobile repair shop of the Providence Motor Car Company, at No. 11 Walnut street, last evening. Charles Wilcox Flint, head of the company, placed the damage to the burned machines at $100,000. Insurance $15,000.

The fire started on the ground floor and swept with rapidity to the second floor, breaking out on the roof before the arrival of the firemen.

GERMANS ARE HEARST'S GUESTS ON BOSTON VISIT

ALLIANCE MEMBERS WILL MAKE BOAT TRIP TO INSPECT EMPEROR'S GIFT TO HARVARD.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Delegates to the convention of the National German-American Alliance, a very influential body, representing one and a half millions of Germans throughout the United States, will be the guests of William R. Hearst on a unique trip to Boston, Monday, October 7.

The purpose of the excursion is to visit the Germanic Museum presented to Harvard University by the German Emperor, and Mr. Hearst suggested this visit because he thought it would be particularly attractive to the delegates in the convention, to inspect the magnificent gift of Emperor William to the Institute of learning at Cambridge.

When the suggestion was made to Dr. C. J. Hexamer, president of the Alliance, it was accepted with pleasure, as it was appreciated that few of the delegates have had an opportunity to view this great art collection and it was felt that all would heartily welcome the opportunity to see it.

The National German Alliance will meet in convention in this city Saturday, October 5, and delegates will be present from about forty States. It is expected that 150 of them will make the trip, and as many of them will be accompanied by their wives and daughters, the party will probably consist of 200 people.

Make Trip by Boat.

Preparations have been completed for the transportation of the entire convention by boat, leaving Monday evening to arrive at Boston the next morning. After a day spent in visiting the Museum and sightseeing, the party will return by boat, leaving Boston Tuesday afternoon, reaching New York Wednesday morning.

The convention will be Mr. Hearst's guests throughout the entire trip, except that a reception is planned by the Boston branch of the National German-American Alliance on Tuesday.

One of the features of this unusual affair will be a Kommers, or social session, on board the steamboat Monday evening. These affairs are informal, and for that reason are thoroughly enjoyable, and the good fellowship for which the Germans are noted will have full play on this occasion.

Hearst's Letter.

The correspondence between Mr. Hearst and Dr. Hexamer that resulted in the arrangement to take the entire convention on an extended jaunt is as follows:

NEW YORK, Sept. 15, 1907.

Dr. C. J. Hexamer, President National German-American Alliance, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Sir—The National German-American Alliance is to meet in biennial session in New York, October 5, 1907. It occurs to me that the occasion furnishes an excellent opportunity for your distinguished guests to inspect the Germanic Museum at Cambridge, the munificent gift of the German Emperor to Harvard University.

This collection is not only intrinsically interesting, but should be most attractive to the members of the alliance, because it emphasizes the cooperation of the intellectual friendship that has always existed between the people of these great nations.

If you agree with me on this subject, it will afford me much pleasure to invite the visiting delegates of the convention to be my guests, leaving here Monday evening, October 7, by one of the steamship lines for Boston. Sincerely yours,

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

Accepts Invitation.

Sept. 12, 1907.

Hon. William Randolph Hearst, New York.

My Dear Sir—In reply to your favor of the 11th instant, I beg leave to state that I consider your suggestion admirable. One that will do much to call general attention to the cultural relations of American citizens of German birth or extraction, and will tend to prevent the doubt and friction existing between Germany and our revered nation.

I therefore accept with much pleasure, in behalf of the delegates and myself, your kind invitation; and beg leave to assure you of my sincere appreciation of your noble efforts to bring about pleasant international relations.

C. J. HEXAMER,

President of the National German-American Alliance.

Following the acceptance of the invitation by Dr. Hexamer, Mr. Adolf Timm, secretary of the Alliance, came to New York and completed the arrangements with a representative of Mr. Hearst.

The Morgen-Journal, Mr. Hearst's German newspaper, has been cooperating with the German-American Alliance to build up and strengthen the alliance in New York City and the East, and this work will be greatly promoted by Mr. Hearst's invitation to the national body.

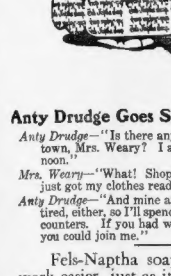
BOY HAMMERS DYNAMITE CAN; GIRL INJURED

While playing in a vacant lot in Malden, thirteen-year-old John Dodge found a sealed can.

Curious to know what it contained, he placed it on a nearby rock, while his little companions gathered round, and hit it with an axe.

The can contained dynamite, and as a result of John's investigating turn of mind, one of his playmates, the seven-year-old Estelle, was severely cut in the left leg, the wound requiring five stitches to close it.

The police to-day are conducting a rigid investigation of the matter in an effort to trace the ownership of the dynamite, and are making a thorough search of the field, with the thought that there may be more little sealed cans and more inquisitive boys, and that next time even more serious results might happen from its finding.



Anty Drudge Goes Shopping on Washday.

Anty Drudge—"Is there anything I can get you downtown, Mrs. Weary? I am going shopping this afternoon."

Mrs. Weary—"What! Shopping on washday! Why, I've just got my clothes ready for the line."

Anty Drudge—"And mine are all ironed. I'm not a bit tired, either, so I'll spend the afternoon at the bargain counters. If you had washed the Fels-Naptha way, you could join me."

Fels-Naptha soap will make kitchen work easier, just as it does the washing of clothes. Fels-Naptha will clean anything that is cleanable, and do it far better and quicker than any other soap.

Try it on your pots, pans, dishes and other kitchen utensils. It will "cut" the grease quick as a wink and leave them bright and shiny. It will clean glassware and china, and polish them at the same time.

And because it will do this far better in cold or lukewarm water, there is no danger of breaking fragile glass and china by putting them in scalding water.

Kitchen sinks, shelves, cupboard and floor should all be scrubbed with Fels-Naptha. It whitens woodwork as well as cleans it, and neither roaches nor ants will infest a kitchen where the cleaning is regularly done with Fels-Naptha, and chips of the soap placed where they congregate.

So long, Doves!

A bunch of jubilant ball players, mainly recruits, are on the rails now, bound for Chicago. They are none other than the Doves, or Squabs, as they might now be rightly termed.

The Doves will not return to Boston until October 5, when they open a two-day series of three games against the Brooklyns. These will be their final contests of the season, so far as the National League is concerned.

The Boston's trip West will largely be an experimental one, as they will take advantage to try out many new players. All the Western cities will be visited by the Boston Nationals before they return.

Anxious About New Talent.

The Doves are anxious for some of their new talent to make good on this trip, as it will mean a great deal next season, when they expect to change their team in many positions.

Among the recruits taken by the Doves were Ball, the Lynn, New England League catcher, and Knotts of the Worcester Champions of the same organization.

The Giants defeated the Doves easily in the final game here, 10 to 2, making only one victory out of four for them.

Pat Flaherty was hammered all over the lot, and had to give way to Lindaman, while Mike Lynch was a puzzle.

HUB BOXERS IN DEMAND

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Young Donohue, the crack Boston lightweight, who has bested such good ones as Young Erne, Harry Lewis, Maurice Sayers, Unk Russell, George Mendie and Amby McGarry, is to meet Harry Scroggs of the Paddock A. C., Eighth avenue and Fifty-ninth street, tomorrow night.

Scroggs made such a great battle against Matty Baldwin at the club's last meeting that the members requested that he be used against Donohue in place of Willie Fitzgerald.

Matty Baldwin is matched to meet Bert Dayes next Monday at the Crown A. C., Brooklyn, and he had an offer to box Abe Attell for the featherweight championship, the bout to take place at Indianapolis.

Two Chicago clubs also want Baldwin to meet Packy McFarland, but Johnny Mack declined them both, as he had promised to give Tommy Murphy a chance to reverse the decision which Baldwin won from him some time ago.

Both Baldwin and Donohue are training at Ashton, R. I., with Jimmy Gardner, who will meet Honey Melody at the Paddock A. C. in the near future.

DUFFY VISITED HUB.

Hugh Duffy of the Providence Club took advantage of an off day yesterday and came to Boston for a visit and called at both the American League and National League headquarters, and took in the exhibition games at Lynn in the afternoon.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Are the Pilgrims on the toboggan? Manager Jim McGuire's charges have certainly been playing poor baseball for over a week now, and there is no let-up in sight.

The Bostons won the final from the Athletics on their own grounds to the Hub. Then they tackled Connie Mack's team at Philadelphia. They lost the first game by a wide margin, and then they played a fifteen-inning contest, 6 to 5.

Athletics Won Doubleheader.

Last Saturday the two teams clashed in a doubleheader, and the Athletics won both. Since Monday the Bostons have been playing here and have lost four games in a row.

Eight games without a victory is very bad work for a team with the reputation that the Bostons have earned for themselves since Jim McGuire took up the managerial reins. It is not so long ago that the Bostons put it all over the White Sox, and it was really the Hub team that put the pennant practically out of the reach of the Windy City team.

What can be the matter with the Pilgrims now? That they are on the toboggan now even their most ardent supporters will have to admit, but may be they will brace to-day, and win their last game of the season from the Senators.

Who would ever dare to predict that the Washingtons would take four games straight from the Bostons, yet that is just what they have done, and all their wins have been rather easy, too.

Young vs. Johnson.

Young and Johnson will probably be the pitchers used to-day, and as the contest will be the final of the season between the teams either at home or abroad, a large crowd will undoubtedly attend.

The Bostons lost yesterday to the Washingtons, 2 to 1. Frank Oberlin a Boston discard, was the man to cause the downfall of the Pilgrims. "Cy" Morgan pitched for the visitors and he did creditable work.

Freddy Parent, who has gotten a number of hard blows from the ball on the head, yesterday wore head-gear, but this didn't seem to help him any, as he was unable to summon enough courage to hit the ball safely.

CUTLER WINS MATCH.

The last block in the three-cushion balkline billiard match between Al Cutler and Jimmy Ryan, which began at Miah Murray's Monday night, was played last night, Ryan winning the block, 50 to 49, but Cutler scoring his necessary 50 points and getting the match by the score of 150 to 115.

SCENES AT HARVARD'S FIRST FOOTBALL PRACTICE OF SEASON

WENDELL. "POOCH" DONOVAN. CAPTAIN PARKER.

JACK STAFFORD INCOMPETENT

President Ban Johnson of the American League sends word from his headquarters in Chicago that he got rid of Jack Stafford, the local umpire, because of incompetency. Ban says an notable example of Stafford's unenlightment was when his decision at first in a game at Washington cost Boston a victory.

KEADY TO COACH BATES.

Tom Keady, formerly of Wakefield High and Dartmouth, has been selected to coach the Bates College team at Lewiston.

COLIN WON'T RACE ROSEBEN

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—James R. Keene will not race his two-year-old Colin against Jim Caesar Johnson's Roseben, according to his stable mentor, Jimmie Rowe.

"Why should he?" asks Rowe. "Here we have a high class young horse, eligible for all next year's big stakes as a three-year-old. Defeating Roseben, or even participating in a grueling race with the 'Big Train' might ruin him for good and all. You can state positively that the race will not come off."

NORWOOD HIGH HAS AN ELEVEN

Norwood High School has organized a football team, with Stephen I. Hunt manager and William A. Billings captain. Among those who have shown up as candidates are four veterans of the team of 1905 (no team in 1906)—Callahan, Hunt, Billings and Corbett—all crack players. Among the candidates are Roberts, Hubbard, Fisher, Norton, Cuff, Winslow, Woods, Halsted, Olson, Metcalf, Reardon, Shyne, Clark and McLeod. Manager Hunt wants games with other high school elevens. Address Stephen I. Hunt, No. 35 Highview street, Norwood.

Backfield—J. H. Rand, F. Fall, A. T. Knox, R. Page and H. V. White.
Fullbacks—Wendell and C. Apollonio.
Quarterbacks—K. E. Cate, G. Wilmer, D. Crocker, A. D. Brown and S. Gallett.
Ends—H. F. Miller, F. V. B. Parke, F. de H. Houston, J. L. Barr, H. A. Rodgers, P. Grant and J. S. Ramsay.
Guards—M. Robinson, W. Blanchard, G. West, B. D. Hodges, A. Bussdorf and E. Y. Long.
Tackles—H. Inches and W. Philipbar.
Centres—R. Parker and J. Nourse.

HARVARD NOT TO HAVE ANY SECRET WORK

Head Coach Joshua Crane is expected to be on hand to-day when the Harvard football candidates will have their second day's practice.

Contrary to the custom on Soldiers Field in the past, there will be no morning practice for the men for a few days, instead, they will be given a little longer afternoon workout, which should prove less tiring than the old system.

Another welcome change at Cambridge this year will be the avoidance of secret practice, which has been so frequent and unpopular at Harvard for the past few years.

The men will be given a little running to do to-day. The ball will be passed around and some light kicking practice indulged in. This will probably be the sum total of the work for the rest of the week.

The practice to-day starts at 3 o'clock on the freshman field.

Twenty-nine men reported to Captain Parker for the first day's play, and it certainly was a husky looking squad.

Only two of the last year's team were on hand. They were Captain Parker, centre, and Jack Wendell, fullback. A number of prominent members of the last year's varsity squad showed up, however. These men were Apollonio, fullback; K. S. Cate, quarterback, on the second team; J. H. Rand, halfback; H. F. Miller, end; R. Y. B. Parke, end; P. Grant, end; M. Robinson, guard; J. Nourse, centre, and H. Inches, tackle.

The following is a list of the players who reported for practice yesterday, with the positions for which they are trying:

Runs All The Time Like COASTING DOWN HILL

Most delightful of all motoring experiences is the fairy-like sensation of coasting down a long hill with the motor idle and the car skimming along at the impulse of unheard, unseen, unfelt power. Try the SIX-TEEN-SIX and find the newest joy of motoring. Six quiet, powerful cylinders, producing power three times on every crank-shaft revolution, exerting constant tension on the driving mechanism — eliminating vibration, jar, shock, noise and the jerk and wear of four cylinder motors—using only minimum power for ordinary work and reserving tremendous power for bursts of speed and triumphant hill climbing, minimizing expense of operation and upkeep, giving its owner a joy and pride heretofore unrealized—the most superb car possible to imagine—this is the Winton Six-Teen-Six. "To own such a car is to own a kingdom; the driver's seat is a throne, the steering wheel a sceptre, miles are your minions and distance your slave"—A Six Cylinder Courtship. Output limited to 500 cars, making it the EXCLUSIVE Car for 1908. See it today. Our small quota will soon be sold.

The Conundrum That Zadig Guessed.

Don't Skip Down and Read the Answer. Study It Out for Yourself.

Copyright, 1907, by American Journal-Examiner

Do you know anything about Zadig, that good, wise, very honorable and consequently very unhappy man invented by Voltaire?

Get the story of Zadig from the public library some day and read it. You will enjoy it. Meanwhile, study this conundrum, full of meaning, with which the grand mage tried to puzzle the wise Zadig.

The gentleman that won the prize and that answered all the conundrums was to be King of Babylon, and incidentally he was to get Astarte, the beautiful Queen. Zadig wanted and got the throne and Astarte. This is the first big puzzle that he guessed:

"What is of all things in the world the longest and the shortest, the quickest and the slowest, the most minute and the greatest, the most neglected and the most regarded, without which nothing can be done, which devours all that is little, and gives permanent life to all that is great?"

Itobad, rival of Zadig, couldn't guess this. But BOSTON AMERICAN readers, more modern and intelligent, will know that the answer to the conundrum is the word "TIME."

This is the wise Zadig's answer—otherwise Voltaire's answer—as clever and pleasing as the conundrum itself:

"Nothing is longer than time, because it is the measure of eternity. Nothing is shorter, because it is insufficient for all our plans. Nothing is slower for him who waits, nothing more rapid for him who enjoys. Time stretches out to the infinite in greatness, and it is infinitely divisible in littleness. All men neglect time, all regret its loss. Nothing can be done without time. It wipes out all that is unworthy of posterity and immortalizes great things."

Zadig was fit to be King, and so should we ALL be if we could teach ourselves to appreciate time as he appreciated it.

The real Zadig was Voltaire, a brave, noble, industrious, marvellous thinker and fighter.

It would be worth your while to cut out these words of his that we quote.

Paste them up where you can see them, or send them to a friend.

You'll do some wide reading before you meet anything better.

Way Up in the Woods

By Wex Jones

Got three blankets, four large knives, two revolvers, two rifles, one shotgun, one pocket mirror, one camera with 856 plates, one pocket compass, 2,000 cartridges, one box doninedia biscuits and one round trip ticket to Passmeaquiddofotbacco Lakes.

Arrived at Pete Lakes this morning in a nifty khaki suit with three loose in their shoulders, guns handy in case of attack by any deer.

Wouldn't let any deer bite me and live. Native of place told me no deer likely to harm me within ten miles of the village. Kept guns on anyway; you never can tell when there will be trouble in the woods—and had some photographs taken.

Set out in wagon for hunting ground with guide. Wagon has no springs and jolts terribly. Oh, the hardships of hunting! But wouldn't give in before guide, who is a marvellous fellow.

Camped in a most unpleasant fellow, the woods. No comforts. Bacon and beans for a meal. Most impossible foods, both of them.

Guide warned us not to sleep too near the window, as he said the lynx has a habit of jumping through windows to hear the glass break, which affords it intense amusement. He says farmers find glass one of their principal sources of expense where there are many lynxes. The brute does not injure persons inside unless he happens to alight on them, when his claws inflict painful scratches. Most remarkable animal.

Guide volunteered to stay awake and guard us (for $5) all night. Thought I heard him snoring during the night, but he said he was merely trying to lead the lynxes on. Most remarkable plan.

In the woods to-day. Wonderful to be in the trackless forest, far from the haunts of men. Pocket compass hard to go by, as needle keeps swinging round. When it's steady it's usually pointing to a tree, and how can you walk through a tree? Most remarkable invention.

Guide pointed out seven deer at different times to-day, but they got away before I could see them. Guide says his eyes were developed in old Indian days, when a man's life depended on seeing the relentless redskin through a tree. Most remarkable man.

Shot at a deer to-day. Found it to be a cow. Owner appeared from behind a tree. Guide said $50 would pay for it. Expensive, this free life in the primeval forest.

Shot at another deer to-day. It was a man. He wasn't hit, so I don't see what he was angry about, as I offered to pay for his hat, which with the bullet had spoiled a little. Asked me what I thought I was shooting at in the city limits.

"City limits!" said I.

"Sure," said he. "You're in the town of Passmeaquiddofotbacco right now."

"But our guide——"

"Guide!" said the native.

The guide had gone by this.

It seems he had guided us around and around a field back of the town hall. Most remarkable man. It was his brother's cow we shot, too—value $20. Most remarkable man!

Which Gains by Trading Husbands?

By Winifred Black

WHICH would you rather be, Mrs. Frederick Pinney Earle that is, as she stood on the deck of that steamer and watched her husband and his wife until that will be fade into the distance together, or Mrs. Earle that will be, as she stood on the pier with the man who was of so little account that his own wife gave him up without a struggle?

I'm afraid if I had been Mrs. Earle that is to be that philosophic farewell would have been a bit too much for me, and I should have bowed courteously and low to the Mrs. Earle that was, and said "Thank you for nothing," and left the man in the case to stand on the pier—alone.

Any man who's not worth being jealous of is hardly worth marrying, is he?

I came across the ocean once with a nice little man and his pretty little wife and their attractive little girl.

At the pier was a woman I knew. She had come to meet the man, his wife and little girl and to spend two or three weeks with them at their country place.

She was the first wife of the man; she had given her fortune to him for a wife, and the little girl was her own child.

Civilized?

THE woman I knew smiled her brilliant, metallic smile when she noticed that the people on the ship who knew the story of the man and his wife were staring at her.

"Just because I'm civilized," she said, "and don't cling to the barbarous, outgrown idea which used to be called marriage."

I wonder if that woman really thought she was civilized just because she had outgrown all decent natural human beings. If she is civilized, then so is the salamander, and so is not any normal woman with a real heart in her breast. Perhaps in this recent case of "Hello; let's trade husbands!" Mrs. Earle that is is just trying an experiment.

I knew a woman who did that once.

Her husband fell in love with another woman; desperately, madly, in love. My friend, not being civilized into a salamander, was badly wounded when she found out the truth. She cried a good deal, I think, when she was alone, and once or twice she thought of killing herself, but she changed her mind and went calmly to her husband.

"My dear," she said, "I know why you are so miserable. You are in love with Mrs. So-and-So. Of course, I am a little piqued about it, and I've been on the verge of making a fool of myself, but that is all over. I will divorce you to-morrow, take my children and half of your estate, go away and live as happily as I can. I think on the whole it will be rather a relief for us to be apart."

The Other Woman

THEN she went to the other woman and told her the same thing.

"My husband is a good fellow," she said, "and I ought to love him, but somehow he bores me so that I can't. I find that he cares for you, and you don't know what a relief it will be to get him off my mind. I am applying for a divorce to-morrow. Make your arrangements and marry him as soon as possible, for I warn you he is a trifle fickle; you are the—let me see, one, two, three, four—yes, you are the sixth since we were married."

She filed suit for divorce and went away for awhile; her husband followed her; he begged, he pleaded, and finally, simply to oblige him, his wife withdrew her action for divorce.

The other woman? Oh, she was making some other married man believe that she was his heaven-born affinity.

Perhaps when Mr. Earle finds his wife gone, and the woman who wants to be his wife with him, he will change his mind about civilization.

In that case, our pity now, in any case, which would you rather be, the woman who took her child and her grief and her dignity and her self-respect across the ocean with her, or the woman who stayed behind with a man who would permit such a thing to happen?

Little Editorials from the People

FARMER VS. MILK TRUST

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

In reply to Milk Contractor Grausteen's statements upon the proposed price of milk I would say:

I agree with Mr. Grausteen that nine cents is enough to pay per quart. The dealers could sell it for less and make reasonable profit.

Mr. Grausteen does not tell the public what he pays the farmer for his milk. He keeps that back. He says the farmer asks eleven and one-half cents advance per can. That would give the farmer forty cents per can of eight and one-half quarts, or less than five cents per quart. To sell it at ten cents would give five cents profit per quart. Does it seem just to the public that the dealer should receive 100 per cent. profit on every quart of milk he sells?

It is the Milk Trust that is reaping the profit on the quart of milk, and not the farmer who produces it.

Another point to consider is the amount of money which the dealer must invest in his part of the business—delivery wagon and cans. Compare this with the farmer's outlay. He buys his cows, buys his farm to produce food for them, buys grain, for all of which he must pay cash before he can secure cash. Then he must give the milk dealer six weeks' credit before he receives payment. Often then many milk dealers fail to pay promptly, and often leave large balances never paid.

I think Mr. Grausteen or any other milk dealer should be subjected to the same assertion he does about farmers trying to profit.

They are simply trying to get somewhere near what rightly belongs to them, and which they have never yet since that gigantic Milk Trust got hold of everything.

I would like to hear from Mr. Grausteen again. I shall be pleased to answer him, and give the public a little more information concerning the way milk is handled by the dealers.

On the Bachelor Who Tells a Group of Married Men All About the Best Way to Manage a Wife

BACK in one corner of the smoker was a small man with a clerical side whisker, who sucked his cigar with pursed lips and indrawn cheeks, and removed it to let the smoke out.

Occasionally he coughed and blinked his eyes, but he listened with interest that nothing could distract to the views on the management of women announced by the ruddy-faced man with the meerschaum pipe who occupied the one chair so fully that its wicker sides creaked every time he drew his breath.

"You've got to humor them," said the stout man in the chair, "that's all there is to it. Just humor 'em and you'll get along all right with any of 'em."

"You can humor them a little too much, though," said the small man. "I don't know that it always goes."

"Shucks!" said the stout man, with a large smile. "You can't do anything with 'em by driving 'em. When you do that they get ugly. Humor 'em. You're man, ain't you? Well, then, what's the use of getting up on your hind legs and raising a disturbance every time she says anything you don't like or does anything that doesn't suit you? No use at all. It doesn't do any good. Just wink the other eye. Make allowances. Ain't I right?"

"That's right," agreed the man with the crush hat in the window seat. "Might as well."

"Humor 'Em"

"CERTAINLY," said the stout man. "Suppose she does want a new hat," he continued. "What difference does it make? Let her have it and have peace and quiet. Peace and quiet is a whole lot better than the money in the bank. Tell her it's becoming to her and cheap at double the price.

"That's the way to manage 'em. If she wants a thing one way and you want it done the other, tell her she's the doctor. You can afford to do that. It won't hurt you, and it makes it pleasanter all around. Don't it? Of course it does."

The small man with the neat side whiskers threw the remaining two-thirds of his cigar away and shuddered slightly. "Suppose a man has a scolding wife," he suggested.

"Let her scold," advised the stout man. "She might as well say what she wants to get out and relieve her mind. It does her good. It's better than letting her bottle it up.

"You don't have to listen, do you? Just sit still and act as if you were taking it all in. That's all you have to do. Don't talk back. The more you talk back the more you'll get of it. Even up that she's right when she gets through, and that will tickle her to death. Kind of humor her."

"That's all very well," said the small man, dissentingly.

"You show me a better way," said the authority. "You don't expect a woman to act like a man, to begin with. She's got her own little peculiarities, of course, but you don't make anything by trying to correct 'em with a club.

"If she wants to go out to the theatre when you want to stay home and smoke your pipe, that's natural enough. She needs a little fun once in a while. Get right into your good clothes and take her.

"You might just as well as stick to the easy chair and have trouble. Maybe the show won't be so rotten, after all. You don't never tell. That laughed, but the small person in the corner looked more serious than ever. "It's your idea to let a woman have her way in everything?" he said.

"Why not?" demanded the stout man. "She'll take it, anyway."

"I don't agree with you," said the small person, with much decision in his tone. "A woman ought to consult her husband's wishes and defer to them. I don't believe in allowing them too much freedom. I don't mean by that that she should be treated with harshness or anything of that sort.

"It's a man's place to protect her and to provide for her and to be kind to her, but too much indulgence of her whims is not conducive to a happy married life. She belongs to the weaker sex, and a man is a man, and can't take more of him if he maintains his dignity as a man. He has got to put his foot down when she goes too far. Yes, sir!" He slapped his sharp knee emphatically and then got up with a start. "Well, this is my station. Good day, gentlemen."

The Reason

"MY, he's fierce, isn't he?" commented the man with the window seat as the small passenger disappeared.

The stout man made no reply, but let down the window and looked out.

They saw the small person with the clerical side whiskers drop his suit case on the platform to greet a little woman and an amiable boy, who hurried to him and embraced him quite affectionately.

The stout man looked disappointed. "I'd give ten dollars to know whether that was his wife, and I'd bet ten dollars it isn't," he said, as he squeezed ponderously back into his chair.

"That fellow's wife weighs close on to two hundred, and when she yells 'Hey, you!' he comes a trotting. Want to bet?"

"Are you married?" asked the man with the crush hat.

"Me?" said the stout man. "Great Scott! Do I look it?"
